When drawn out on the ice the horse was covered with a blanket, and the poor animal was utilised and fires were built about him on the ice. The plug proved successful in getting him to the stable.

A Trundling Mop.

Inspector J. H. Knight, of this town writes as follows to the Montreal Star "Notes and Queries" column: Your correspondent, "Zelah," wishes to know what a trundling mop is. This was an article common use in England forty years ago, and probably now. It is made of locks of wool fastened to the end of a stick, so as to make the head, about 12 or 15 inches in diameter, of uniform density. It can be trundled at a rapid rate by a skilful movement of the handle between the arms for the purpose of drying it, an operation possible with an ordinary Canadian rag mop.

May vs The Farmers Union Life Insurance Company.

Following is the arbitrator's finding with regard to the above claim: The insurance on the contents of plaintiff's outbuildings was $700. We find after making all proper deductions from the statement of claim that his loss was somewhat over $700 but as the insurance was for that sum we cannot award him more. This is the amount which plaintiff claimed from the company. Under the clause in the policy it is agreed that the costs should be paid by the company in case the full amount of the plaintiff's claim is awarded. In this case had not been so disposed of, we would have felt called upon to consider the question as to how far, when they were justified in insisting that the plaintiff should establish his claim by convincing evidence to the effect that the president and directors could have otherwise discharged their duty to the other policy holders, who have no equitable claim to the payment of this loss. It is not necessary that we should make further comment on this phase of the matter than to say that the plaintiff's claim is in its statement and proofs of loss, yet they were misleading, and naturally raised such presumptions against his claim in the minds of the directors as made it their duty to require an investigation. For these reasons, we would have felt it just to have modified the disposition of the case had it been in our power, but we are concluded by the statute and the evidence which is drawn in accordance with the report of W. W. Dean, Wm. Cameron, S. H. Hopkins, arbitrators.

Four Buffalo newspaper reporters were caught by the police at a prize fight the other day, and were run in with the gang. But Judge King dismissed the reporters, saying that it was a principle of law, as well as common sense, that three kinds of men were permitted to go anywhere without blame-doctors, clergymen and reporters.
