Scott's Emulsion.

If we told you that your baby was starving, that it actually didn't get enough to eat, you might resent it. And yet there are thousands of babies who never get the IMPERIAL fat they should in their food or who are not able to digest the fat that they do get. Fat is a necessity to your baby. It is baby life and baby beauty. A few drops of Scott's Emulsion for all little ones one, two and three years of age is better than cream for them. They thrive and grow on it.

Appalling Calamity on a French Steamer Others Died From Scalds

by Steam

San Francisco, Jan. 19.-The steamer Rio de Janeiro brings news that one of the boilers of the French steamer Sachalien exploded while the vessel was off the Chinese coast on Dec. 2, bound from Singapore for Hong Kong, Eleven of the stokers in the fire-room and one engineer were killed instantly by the explosion or by the scalding steam. The chief stoker was so badly injured that he died a few hours afterwards, and four other firemen died the next day as a result of their burns.

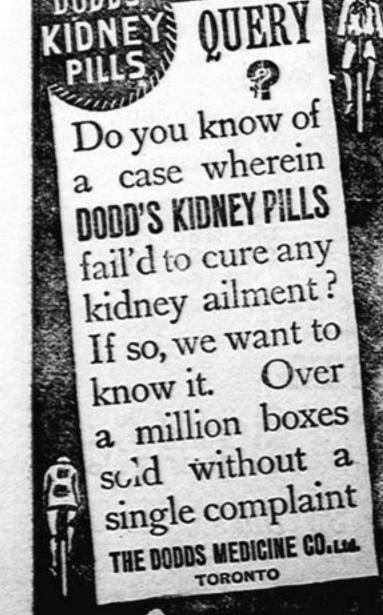

The vessel was crowded with passengers, and there was the wildest confusion on board. The passengers had just assembled in the saloon for dinner when there came a loud report like that of a cannon from the direction of the engine room. The deck-boards were torn up, gratings were sent flying in the air and the steamer trembled from stem to stern. A dense cloud of steam and smoke issued from the hatches with a deafening toar of es-

The officers of the vessel who were on the decks rushed to their places at the lifeboats, and from the cabins came screaming women and shouting It was some time before order could be restored and the extent of the

As soon as the steam had cleared away men were sent below in the Eleven Lascar firemen lay about the floor before the ruined boiler, dead or writhing at the last gasp, with their flesh parboiled by the terrific bath of superheated steam in which the explosion had plunged them. Expressions of Gratification at the Signing of the Arbitration Treaty-Lord Salisbury and Mr. Balfour Speak and the Address in Reply Passes-Cable News. London, Jan. 19 .- Parliament reassembled to-day, and the members of the House of Commons, as usual, proceeded to the House of Lords to hear the reading of the Queen's speech, which was read by the Lord Chan-

The speech starts out by saying that the relations with all foreign nations continue friendly, refers to the appalling massacres in Turkey and notes that the ambassadors and the Porte are still conferring, and goes on to speak in a congratulatory way of the success of the expedition to the Soudan. Her Majesty refers to the Venezuela boundary dispute, and hopes the trouble will be settled amicably without exposing to risk the interests of any colonists who have established rights in the disputed territory.

with the United States, the speech It is with much gratification that have concluded a treaty for general arbitration with the President of the United States, by which I trust that all difficulties that may arise between us may be peacefully adjusted. hope that this arrangement may have powers the consideration of the principle by which the danger of war may be notably abated.

Regarding the arbitration treaty

Her Majesty speaks of the trouble in Matabeleland and Mashonaland, compliments the troops for courage and steadfastness and deplores the loss of valuable lives in repressing the

The appointment of the commission to look into the causes of depression of the sugar industry is referred to and then the Indian famine is taken up. Her Majesty expresses sympathy with her Indian subjects, and says: "My Government in that country is making every effort to mitigate the suffering and lessen the calamity by the development of railways and irrigation work. The forethought given through a long series of years to the preparation for the most effective arrangements for alleviating distress before the date on your wrapper expires in order to caused by famine makes their task

In concluding the speech outlines the legislative program as follows: A measure for the promotion of primary education by securing maintenance of voluntary schools will be laid before you, and, if time permits, you will be invited to consider further proposals for educational legislation. It is desirable to make better provision for the compensation of working people who suffer from accidents, and a bill with that object in view will be submitted to you. Your consent will be asked to provisions which, in the judgment of the military authorities, are required for the efficiency of military defences of A bill will also be submitted to you to improve the arrangements for the water supply of the Metropolis. In order to promote the interests of agriculture, which are of paramount importance in Ireland, you will be asked to consider a bill to establish a Board of Agriculture, and further legislative proposals will be brought before you, if the time at your disposal is sufficient for the purposes. Bills admitting the evidence of accused persons, amending the law in respect of bills of sale and the registration of land, for revising the acts in respect of the formation of limited companies, an amendment to the Agricultural Holdings Act in Great Britain, the exclusion of goods manufactured in prisons in other countries, the establishment of reformatories for inebriates, and for amending the existing procedure in respect of private bill; coming from Scotland and Ireland have been prepared. I heartily commend your important deliberations to the guidance of Almighty God. The benches of the House of Commons were crowded with members, and the galleries were packed with privileged spectators, Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, First Lord of the Treasury; Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies, and Sir William Harcourt, the leader of the Opposition in the House, were greeted with prolonged cheers as they entered the chamber.

After the Queen's speech had been read by the Speaker, Viscount I'olkestone, member for the south division of Wiltshire, moved the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, and in the course of his remarks referred to the approaching completion of the sixtleth year of the reign of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and expressed hope that the event so unique in the annals of the country would be befittingly celebrated.

Sir William Harcourt said that the most important as well as the most satisfactory statement contained in the Queen's speech was the reference made to the relations between Great Britain and the United States. He heartily congratulated the country upon the conclusion of the differences regarding Venezuela, and gave them unstinted praise for the general arbi tration treaty which was recently signed by the British Ambassador at Washington and the American Secretary of State. Sir William's remarks were received with cheers.

Sir William Harcourt, continuing his remarks, said that there could not be a better celebration or the buth year of Her Majesty's reign than that her Government should be among the first settling their differences by arbitration. He denounced the Nile campaign, and asked the Government to justify their Egyptian policy in regard to Armenia he was glad to hear that the Government had abandoned hostility to Russia in the matter. Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, Jovern-ment leader in the House, made a of the British steamer Holbein for speech, in which he spoke of the Angle of the British steamer Holden for towing the British steamer Cotchele into Hallfax in November last. refused to do. The Government would therefore take measures to effect such an investigation, and would shortly announce the terms upon which the investigation body would be appointed. He also intimated that the Government would afford a chance for the House to debate the subject after the Amicably Settled debate on the address in reply to the Queen's speech had been finished, and before the budget should be taken up. Edward Blake (Liberal), member for the south division of Longford, accordingly withdrew a motion regarding the Irish taxation question, which he

IN THE UPPER HOUSE.

After the Lord Chancellor, Lord Halsbury, had read the Speech from the Throne, the customary address in reply to the speech was moved by the Marquis of Bath, who was attired in the uniform of an officer of the Yeomen of the Guards. The motion was seconded by Lord Kenyon.

Prime Minister Salisbury said he regretted Lord Rosebery's retirement from the leadership of the Liberal party for the moment. He paid a high tribute to Lord Rosebery's patriotic policy as shown in his speech upon the occasion of his retirement, and then proceeded to defend the coninitiated the anti-Russian policy of 1878. It was the Crimean War that initiated it, but the powers were not generally agreed that if reforms were not granted in Armenia material pressure would be applied to the Sultan by the rest of Europe. There were but slightly different wordings, he said, in the communications of the powers in regard to the way it should be done, but all of them were convinced that unless the Sultan should introduce genuine and effective reforms the werst results must follow.

In regard to the Nile campaign the Premier said that Dongola was taken because it was on the route to Khartoum, which place must eventually be taken from the Dervishes. He repeated that it was the intention of the British Government to re-conquer the Soudan for Egypt. In regard to the treaty of arbitration just concluded with the United States, he said he could not speak fully upon the subject because the agreement had not yet been ratified. Still he would say that the people must not think that they were living in the millennial dispensation. He hoped, however, that something would be done to dimish the risk of war. He would not say that the treaty would remove the greatest risks of war or restrain a Napoleon or a Bismarck, but the policy with the United States was full of an infinite number of small differences which, sometimes exaggerated, caused irritation and enmity. The formation of a tribunal of arbitration would settle these differences, would prevent such and stop the two nations who understand each other so well that unless they are friends they are almost certain to be enemies. Another advantage would be derived from the treaty in this respect: A Minister dealing with a subject involving the honor of his country, or which some persons claim involves its honor, has to think how to furnish an account of the transaction which will soothe the jingoes. Arbitration would be a bulwark for such a Minister, for it would be impossible to say he had trifled with the honor of the country if he said he had submitted the matter to the decision of an impartial tribunal. Lord Salisbury pictured the nations groaning under excessive armaments, lieved the measure they had taken was valuable in that it would lead to the gradual disappearance of vast armaments before the growing tendency to substitute judicial decisions for the course arbitrament of war. This would be something to look back

In conclusion, Lord Salisbury said : "I hope that the effort, small as it is, and more successful it will be made." The Prime Minister was heartily cheered when he finished his speech. Lord Castletown (Liberal) gave notice that he would raise the question the financial relations between Great Britain and Ireland. The address in reply to the Queen's speech was then adopted, and the House adjourned.

Another Deputy Returning Of-

Prefers to Walt Until the Case Comes Before the Judges -Mr. Joseph Martin Announces Definitely That He is Out of Politics-Other News

From the Prairie Capital. Winnipeg, Jan. 21.-(Special.)-Malcolm Orr, one of the deputy returning officers in the Macdonald Dominion election, was to-day sent up for trial. The evidence for the prosecution went to show that seven ballots cast in Orr's poll for the Liberal candidate, Mr. Rutherford, had been destroyed or in some way got rid of. The defence reserved its evidence until the case comes up at the assizes, as has been done in all the other cases where deputy returning officers have been committed for trial. The reason for this course is that the Conservatives claim that the magistrates selected to conduct the preliminary trials are partisan. They contend that when the cases come before judges a different complexion will be put on them. There is a warm discussion now going on in Winnipeg Board of Trade circles. The Dominion tariff commissioners will be here shortly, and the subject of controversy is whether evidence should be submitted by the board as an organization or by individual members on their own responsibility. Of course, there is more or less politics in the question, which makes it difficult to decide. Eastern Assiniboia people are vigor-

The Rosseau Mystery Remains a Mystery-Jurors Deliberated for Two Hours.

Rosseau, Ont., Jan. 21.-The inquest on James Cooney was resumed at 2 o'clock p.m., when several witnesses were called. One feature of the evidence worthy of mention was some conversation between Arthur Baines and James Cooney during breakfast at the Monteith House on Wednesday morning before there had been anything done in the matter, and some talk of holding an inquest. James Cooney stated to Baines, "Well, they might find some marks on his head caused by the hard lumps thrown into the grave." It might be gathered from this that the son had some idea. of such a mark as was proven by the post mortem to be on the head. Again, in his evidence to-day, he stated that he put the soft earth in first and the hard afterwards. Another feature of the evidence brought out was the probable disposal of the farm to Mr. E. Evans, who was to meet the deceased at Rosseau on Saturday last and settle the bargain. This would deprive the son of any interest in the farm. The son admitted that it was to his interest for his father to live as long as possible, as he could live with him on his pension place, which he expected to receive at his father's death, and pay off the debt against it.

At 7.30 this evening the inquest was resumed, when Coroner Young made his address, dwelling on the facts bearing on the case in an impartial manner. The jury retired at 7.45 and were out for two hours and a quarter and returned with the following versaid James Cooney
