LINDSAY, FRIDAY, JAN. 14, 1898.

THE INAUGURAL MEETING WAS HELD MONDAY MORNING.

Mayor Taylor Congratulated - The Standing Committees for the Year and their Chairmen.

The inaugural meeting of Lindsay's new town council was held Monday at 11 o'clock in the council chamber, in accordance with the provisions of the new act, which states that the meeting shall be held on the second Monday in January, instead of the third, as formerly.

Mayor Taylor said he appreciated the kind words of the speakers, and felt that he would have the good will and striving for the general good. He felt that the council for 1898 was going to distinguish itself by careful, 'economical management of the town affairs, and the general good. He felt ies and insinuations of improper motives. If the resolution or scheme does not commend itself, it can be voted upon without indulging in language upon without indulging in language assistance of the entire council in and the quality of the work done. He certainly felt grateful for his election by acclamation, and the honor conferred would impel him to put forth his very best efforts for the general good. At the evening session he would give some hints for the council's guidance.

The Standing Committees. On motion a committee comprising Messrs. Brady, Crandell, Gillogly, Horn and Smyth, was appointed to draft the standing committees for the year. Pertinent Introductory Remarks by Mayor Taylor-A Large Attendance of Ratepayers - Communications By Laws and Many Motions.

The interest felt by the ratepayers n the new council was clearly manifested Monday by the attendance at the opening session, the council chamber being crowded to the doors by citizens of all classes, who remained fill the close of the proceedings. Mayor Taylor and all of the members were present, and business was taken up at 7.45.

The Mayor's Message. As promised at the morning meeting, Mayor Taylor addressed the council at some length. In opening he alluded to the satisfaction he felt at being able to command the experience of men who had served in former councils and to have the assistance of his old friend Capt. Crandell, who had been a member of the council for a very long term, and who had been his colleague for five years. Some of the members had served in last year's council, but had not taken a very prominent part in council affairs, but he trusted they

Some things in this world, even though the purpose in creating or constructing them may have been partially or wholly selfish, appear to be ordained nevertheless to administer good in some way to the people at large. Thus, St. Paul's Cathedral was built simply as a place of worship, yet it is a sort of hub to the great wheel of London, and a monument whereby to identify and locate the city. For many miles on every side of the big metropolitan octopus you can see the great dome of St. Paul's swelling up in the air; and you have only to say to the inquiring stranger who is seeking the centre of the hugest town in the world, "You notice the dome of the Cathedral?" "Yes." "Well, go an far as that church and you will find yourseif in the heart of London."

Oblige me now by reading the sub-joined letter and the little talk that may follow it, and you will understand the why and wherefore of what has already been written. "In September of last year,"(1896) says a correspondent, "my health began to fail me. I felt low, weak and tired, as if I had no strength left. My appetite was poor, and after eating I had a nagging pain at the chest through to my back. Very often I was in agony and had to apply hot flannels and poultices. Clammy sweats used to break over me and I felt completely exhausted. I could only take slop diet, and soon I was too weak to walk across the floor. I could not lift my hand to do anything and sat in the chair quite helpless.

"I had a doctor attending me who gave me medicines and injected something to ease the pain, but I got no better. I saw two other doctors, and went to Newcastle Infirmary, where they talked of operating on me but I declined to allow them to do so One doctor said that my stomach was ulcerated, and gave me up saying that he could do no more for me. It is of that book I would speak. More copies of it, in suc-cessive editions, are circulated in Great Britain and other countries than of any other books combined. Although the issuing of these books is not a philanthropic enterprise, I think it safe to say that all the charities of the country put together do less real good to the people. They hold up these important facts before the eyes of the public as the dome of St. Paul's is lifted above the grime, smoke and struggle of London. There is no other way to measure the value of seed than by the value of the crop. A good crop simply can not come from poor seed. Second-rate seeds will waste good land, good fertilizer, and good labor, and the crop won't pay expenses. Now as the practical farmer cannot afford to waste time testing seeds to find out whether they are true to name, sound and clean, it stands to reason that the only safe way to buy seeds is to seek the protection of a name that has stood for redaughter, Maggie, to Mr. Geo.
