HE WAS FROZEN STIFF

On Thursday a settler named Burke who lived alohe on a farm about five miles from the village of Haliburton, was found dead in his barn by a neighbor named Holmes. The body was frozen stiff. It appears that Holmes observed smoke issuing from the chimney on Wednesday, but failed to notice any on Thursday, and towards evening, suspecting that all was not right, he made his way to the house through the huge drifts. The door was found unlocked and the dwelling deserted, whereupon Mr. Holmes, expecting the worst, made his way to the barn, where he stumbled over Burke's body outstretched upon the floor. A brief examination established the fact that the unfortunate man must have been dead many hours, as the body was rigid from the action of frost. It is supposed that the poor fellow was stricken with a sudden attack of illness, and being unable to regain the house or seek aid slowly perished from exposure. Two sisters of deceased reside in Beamsville.

Prof. Alexander's lecture on "The Function of Poetry was a profound and philosophical disquisition on the essence, methods, themes and treatment of poetry, enlivened here and there by fine passages beautifully read. The Post is unable to find room for an extended outline of the lecture, but a few central thoughts may be noted. The essence 19 of poetic form is rhythm. Poetry is the expression of strong feeling measured language. There is an affinity between feeling and rhythm. The primary aim of poetry is the excitement of emotion. Intellectual apprehension of a truth is not so great a thing as a realization of the same truth. Poetry deals with only such subjects as associate themselves with emotion.
