NEEPAWA-MANITOBA. Correspondence of THE POST.] MR. EDITOR. -As I cannot write to all my old friends in Victoria county, I want to talk to them through your paper. Well, dear friends. I am an old man that lived among you for forty years, and I came to this country two years ago in April next, not to make riches, but what moved me to come here was to be in the country where my children were. I brought quite a little money with me, lent it out on interest, and got mortgages on farms for it, and then bought six lots in Neepawa and built a good house for myself; I have also a good garden. This is a good place for a garden. My nine children are all along this Manitobs and North-west line except one; all are within two miles of stations. They were with us these last two Christmases. Notwithstanding all the comforts we enjoy by being amongst our children, I will not advise any old people to come to this country except they have plenty of money. As I had nothing to do I travelled a great logs have been got out in 41 months deal through this country. It was everything husband, wife and cabman, drove out to a farmer's in Doure, for the purpose of given by the wife to the farmer (proper papers being signed by all parties concerned.) On their arrival the pair went into the house without the usual rap, the husband tackled the farmer who happened to be lying on the sofa, and tried to hold him down, while the woman seized the child and made for the sleigh. Unfortunately for her purpose, the front garden gate was frozen and in trying to get over it the child made her escape, ran into the house and upstairs to a safe hiding place. The whole matter may be ventilated in organization to break the high prices charged for many articles sold to the farmers. This was in many localities quite justified, and was only the old fight between the buyer and the seller carries on, we have no doubt, long before Noah was advised to build the ark. Co-operative transactions are always beneficial, as they mean large quantities for the buyers as tending to decrease or diminish the population of its villages and towns, it follows that home consumption cannot be as complete, and that stagnation and discomfiture to the producer is as sure as the rising sun. Who is going to buy the good farmer's beef, his potatoes, his garden produce, his wood, and the many small basketsfull the tidy farmers' wives bring curling excursion to Keene. The benedicts to market, if the villages all go to ruin, stores included? We may see many instances of it nowadays, where some farmers send away their money to those large centres such as Montreal, Toronto, and London, for supposed better bargains. Why not patronize your home merchants, who have accommodated you in the past when you could not pay cash at all time-? We firm y believe in patronizing the business men who trust us with their goods when we have not money to pay cash, as we go along throughout the year; still, our motto is to run brief accounts. A very surprising course of commercial reasoning, indeed, is the idea that villagers can buy, and, in fact, can afford to est, while the trade and the money goes to large centres far away.

NARROW ESCAPE. - Willie, the four year son of Mr. P. Taylor, the popular gate keeper at the Canadian General Electric Company's works, who resides on Sherbrooke-st., had a narrow escape from being cremated. On Tuesday afternoon of last week, while left in the house alone a few minutes, his light clothing caught fire from a wood stove. His shrieks of pain aroused the neighbors, who ran in and extinguished the flames. The little lad was burned in a couple of places rather severely, but is now getting along very well, although suffering considerable pain.
