$20,000 for Short Stories. The publishers of McClure's Magazine have decided to spend twenty thousand dollars for short stories during the coming year. They announce that new writers will be especially welcome. Payment will be made on a very liberal scale, and it is believed that this will be more satisfactory than offering prizes. Stories should run from 2,000 to 6,000 words. The shorter the story, the better chance of success.

Men Wanted

This store believes in a liberal system of education. For years it has been teaching women economy and helping them to better values continually. The result is a general interest in whatever we do and a quick response to whatever we offer. Almost every woman within reach of the store knows it from top to bottom. Now we want the men!

There's a way to get them, too, and just as sure as they get into the store they'll want to see all there is. That's exactly what we're after. If we can put ten thousand men in possession of all the facts concerning the business there'll be a heap sight less nonsense and misrepresentation.

So we make a bid for the Clothing trade of young men and elderly men, poor men and rich men, by offering Special Values in Goods they're sure to need.
