The Canadian Lost, LINDSAY, FRIDAY, MARCH. 20, 1896

THE DREGS OF PUBLIC LIFE. The lowest dregs of public life have been reached by Sir Charles Tupper. Not content with reading a private telegram, without the consent of either the the message by omitting words there-from which, as between the sender and from which, as between the sender and themselves the imputation of grovelling sender or receiver, he deliberately garbles receiver, had the greatest import. In his niggardliness by changing their council shallow design to impress the public that and showing to the community that they a conference with Mr. Greenway was to will use my influence in that direction on result from the coercive pelicy of the government, Sir Charles, on his own responsibility, he says, read but a portion Mr. Greenway's message, leaving out the words "As you are aware, we are not to blame for the present situation." The matter was so serious, and the indecency so gross, that Mr. Greenway had to refer to it in the legislature of Manitoba, and Sir Richard Cartwright brought the matter to the attention of the house on Friday last. The shamefaced confession of Sir Charles Tupper had to be made in the presence of the whole house. He turned white and red by turns, and cornered by the presence of Sir Donald The patrons of the ridings of South and Smith, admitted in his own language that North Victoria, very properly believing "all telegrams and other communications | that the sound course for them to pursue between Sir Donald Smith and Mr. Greenway were regarded by them as confidential, and were imparted by Sir Donald Smith to the government as stricty such." Thus, what he was doing was publishing confidential telegrams, imparted in confidence to the government, and it is little wonder that the confession of | patrons arrived at last Saturday at their indecency had a startling effect upon the house of commons. Canadians are humiliated and disgusted with degradation of public life. A pot-house politician would not descend to the depths of dishonorable tactics of the Elder Tupper, and were it not that this is not the first offence of the kind, we would charitably believe in his second-childhood, and accept that as an excuse. In 1887 he deliberately garbled the statements of Mr. Blaine, and afterwards had to admit his dishonor before Mr. Blaine would even officially receive him. This is the man the tories have been booming to replace Sir Mackenzie, of whom, whatever his failings, it can truthfully be said dishonor is not one. Whatever Sir dividuality to secure the good of the Charles' virtues are, honor is not one of pointed out as giving the lie to all his unthem. Little wonder the London (Eng.) selfish professions, and, added to the other Times editorially remarks, "Here in the defeat him either in any mutual conference mother country there can be only one to secure the general public welfare-or at feeling, that of deep regret for the wrong the polls. The issues of the present day are so tremendous that no one can afford done to the fair fame of the eldest of her tobbe selfish, and a course of self-seeking daughter's nations by the lax morality of W. Editor and the public. These, her politicians." When the exposure judiced-Yours, came, forced by the presence in the house itself right in the eyes of nations by a vote of censure. It is no excuse against such a vote that the tories would defeat it. Of course they would. The indecent act might commend itself to the nest of traitors, whose nest at best [must be a mighty unclean thing.

It is this indecent act that Mr. Hughes, M. P., says in the Warder has relieved the party by opening the way for many to support the bill, who otherwise would have opposed it.

It is in this way that the government approach Mr. Greenway. They garble his telegrams and expose his confidence, and this they say is conciliation.

DEAR SIR,-I fear that the council of gaining for itself the reputation of downright meanness, as the disgraceful and dangerous condition of the road from Grimsin's Corner to Lindsay fully testifies. I have, with all charity, canvassed the reason for that road being in its present and North-west. Tickets and full condition, and I regret to say that I can find no other cause for it but shabby penuriousness. With a very small outlay that road could have been put in a condition quite safe for public travel, but it does not appear that half a day's work has been now and throughout the whole winter existing opposite the Newman and Hutton farms. It is a road that is very much the first opportunity, I appeal to my

Many liberals, among them your correspondent, had hoped that in North Ontario the reformers and patrons would unite on a patron candidate, and I believe that both parties were making an honest effort to compromise, and were it not that many believe that the late candidate, R. A. Brandon, in that riding, owing to certain objections, whether well founded or not, could not carry the riding, he might have been agreed upon before now. I regret that he attended the patron meeting at Lindsay last Saturday and through his influence induced the party to commit hopes that he might make the selection of himself sure in North Ontario, If that ate, as it will most certainly defeat itself. Mr. Brandon has always professed that commonwealth; this last move will be spent in levelling the horrible pitch-holes travelled, and when the great commercial advantage to the township to have the county town and railway centre situated in its very heart, is considered, the utter neglect of the roads leading to the town becomes still more unpardonable. The blame cannot be put on the pathmasters, for the condition of the roads is of long. standing and known to every member of the council. Considered individually, the members of the council may be taken as broad-minded men, but whence is the church last Sunday by the pastor. The morning text was found in 1st Cor. 13: 9, phesy in part. But when that which is in part shall be done away.".....The text for the evening service was taken from Luke 16: 19, showing forth the fact that even should one rise from the dead the people would not hear, believe and repent, if they would not heed the message of Moses and the prophets. Why do men not heed the message of Gcd? It is because they love darkness rather than the light which has come into the world, for their deeds are evil, and the light shedding forth its rays upon their evil deeds would reprove them. The efficiency and sufficiency of divine revelation was here shown. The word of God tells us more regarding the future than can anyone who may rise from the dead, for it is the great message from God. The great thing that God is endea-voring to accomplish is that men should have life, but man will not heed the mes sage because it may interfere with his plans to live his chosen life. Therefore to comprehend the desire of God, but an unwillingness to be guided by Him who has sent the message to the world that
