DOMINION BY-ELECTIONS. The Liberals Gain One Seat.

The following are the returns of the by-elections which were held on Wednesday. Out of the four seats the liberals gain two, one of which they formerly held, therefore making a liberal gain of one.

Haldimand—Montague, (conservative), majority 674. Vercheres—Geoffrion, (liberal), majority 150.

Quebec West—Dobell, (conservative), majority 7. Antigonish—McIsaac, (liberal), majority 99.

THE COAL OIL OUTPUT. Within the last few days, American crude petroleum has made a decided advance in price, and is going up each day.

EDITORIAL NOTES. The superannuation leak at Ottawa is costly. The government pay out in superannuation allowances $300,000 a year more than they receive in superannuation fees.

Li Hung Chang, the Chinese viceroy, is still at Tokio, Japan, endeavoring to arrange terms of peace, but in the meantime the Japs are pushing forward and paving the way for a decisive coup d'etat.

Mr. Oulmet, minister of public works in the Dominion government, explained at a recent meeting in Vercheres that the reason for the attitude of the administration in regard to the Manitoba schools lay in the fact that the government was "between the devil and hell."

The ocean racer Paris, of the American line, and the big Canadian Leucania, came within eight of each other on Tuesday last on the voyage to New York, and the passengers and crew were treated to a real old-time Mississippi river trial of speed over a course in Vercheres.

No wonder imperial honors in this country have come to be looked upon with suspicion by sensible and honest men. A couple of notable examples explain the cause. The boss political boodler of his party in Quebec, has been knighted, while Hon. H. G. Joly, an ex-premier and the exponent of everything that is good and pure in public life, has been passed over.

ST. ANDREW'S NEW PASTOR ARRIVES IN LONDON.

Induction of Rev. Robert Johnston, B. D., to his new charge. Rev. Robert Johnston, B. D., the new pastor of St. Andrew's church, accompanied by his wife, arrived in London on Thursday evening of last week at eight o'clock, and was met at the C. P. R. depot by a large representation from his new congregation. Everyone was anxious to greet the popular preacher, and bid him welcome to the Forest City; and it was some time before he and his wife could be extricated from the throng.

THE INDUCTION. On Friday afternoon, commencing at 3 o'clock, his induction to the pastorate of his new charge took place, and this was a red letter day for old St. Andrew's. The church was tastefully decorated with Easter flowers, and the spacious edifice was crowded during the afternoon and evening.

Presbyterian induction is a very impressive service, and it had been 20 years since such a service had been held in St. Andrew's, and the large congregation, with mingled feelings of sorrow and happiness, listened with wrapt attention throughout. On the platform were a number of Presbyterian ministers: Rev. W. J. Clark, of Parkville; Rev. H. F. Hamilton, of St. James; Rev. J. B. Robertson, of Kingsley; Rev. J. G. Stewart, of Knox church; Rev. Alex. Butterfield, of Piquette; Rev. J. W. G. Butler, of St. Andrew's; Rev. Alex. Miller, of Mead; Rev. W. A. Cook, of Dunsmuir; Rev. J. H. Little, of Bethel.

Rev. J. G. Butler, the new pastor of Knox church, preached the customary sermon, taking his text from Mark 16:7: "All things are possible to him that believeth." After which the Rev. Alex. Butterfield, moderator of London presbytery, briefly reviewed the steps taken leading up to the call in the induction by St. Andrew's, and stated that in his ministry of 20 years he had never seen a call so unanimously tendered to any minister.

A HEARTY RECEPTION. The Rev. Mr. Savers then addressed the newly inducted pastor, and the Rev. Mr. McDonald addressed the congregation, after which a half-hour was spent in introductions. As the conclusion of the introduction the large audience were invited to supper in the lecture room, where the ladies had made great preparations—27 long tables loaded with good things awaited the many guests. From 6 to 8 o'clock the waiters were kept busy, after which the people gathered again in the auditorium of the church for the evening service. The church was thronged at this time. The address of welcome from the congregation was delivered by Mr. E. A. Little, of the Collegiate Institute, and the address from the Presbyterian Association of the city was delivered by Rev. W. J. Clark; it is safe to say that no man ever received a more cordial welcome than Mr. Johnston did at the hands of these two gentlemen.

MR. JOHNSTON'S REPLY was looked forward to with a great deal of interest, as it was expected he would to some extent foreshadow his line of work, and his new flock were not disappointed. He stated that he had heard of receptions, and read of them, but he never, in his wildest dreams, imagined such an enthusiastic, hearty and altogether encouraging reception as had been accorded to him on this day. He trusted that his Presbyterian brethren in the ministry would find in him all they had a right to expect. He believed they would stand shoulder to shoulder in the cause of Christ. And these words he intended for all who named the name of Jesus. He feelingly recalled the memory of the loyal and loving people he had left. But while the memory was to have a place in his heart, it was, no doubt, still remembered their late beloved pastor, it did not lessen the heartiness of the new love. He treated they would give him the loyal support and help, sympathy and love, they had extended to their departed pastor, whose place he hoped to wish to take, trusting that his memory would ever live. He was glad they had welcomed him as an ambassador of the Lord Jesus Christ. "Friends," he said, "I come to you as a preacher of the gospel. There were those who demanded the discussion of topics and events that occupied the popular ear, but he asked that they demand from him not that he had come to them as a newspaper, or journalist, or a platform speaker. The theme of the pulpit was eternally the same. It was sin and sorrow, and freedom from sin, and comfort for the sorrowing. And while he asked them to demand his best, he also demanded theirs. He asked them to be devoted to the service of God; to hold Wednesday night as a night sacred to the Lord Jesus. They could not dress of the day that were thronging his heart. Yesterday morning he could have turned back, yet he realized that God was his presence, while on the other hand he would find there an extensive field for his labor. It is safe to predict a great religious work will be accomplished through him in his new sphere of labor.

WELCOMED BY THE SABBATH SCHOOLS. On Saturday afternoon a five o'clock tea was given to the three Sabbath schools of the congregation in the lecture room of the church, at which there was an enthusiastic turnout of the children. An address of welcome was read by one of the scholars and replied to by Mr. Johnston.

EASTER SUNDAY marked the inaugural sermon of Mr. Johnston in St. Andrew's, and the church was crowded to the doors both morning and evening. As was expected, two brilliant discourses were delivered. Mr. Johnston had not heard Mr. Johnston before; were more than pleased with his graceful manner in the pulpit, his eloquent, yet simple language, and his many pointed illustrations. He has the gift of imparting his enthusiasm to others. He is a great organizer and a tireless worker, and St. Andrew's church and the city of London are to be congratulated on securing his presence, while on the other hand he will find there an extensive field for his labor. It is safe to predict a great religious work will be accomplished through him in his new sphere of labor.

COMMUNICATIONS. Our Fire Department. [To the Editor of THE EVENING POST.] Sir,—An anonymous communication rarely passes any merit, and usually contains statements which are in marked contrast to the facts, as is the case of your correspondent who writes under the nom-plume of "One who feels the expense of the fire." If the writer is properly designated he must either be an insurance agent or a sufferer from one or more of the recent fires; no matter which so far as he himself is concerned, as his motive is quite clear, but to those who respect opinion and have some regard for the truth it is necessary to disclaim the authorship of the letter referred to.

I have attended every fire, and with the exception of the one at the Benson house I have only the highest praise for Capt. A. Sinclair and his company, and so far as the Benson house is concerned, the same mistake would probably have been made by the most experienced man, owing to the dense volume of smoke, it was a difficult matter to locate the fire. Yours, J. H. SOUTERLAND.
