HONOR TO DARTMOUTH.

Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., Whose Giant Intellect Discovered Paine's Celery Compound.

Two giants among men—the greatest statesman and the greatest physician that America has produced—Daniel Webster and Edward E. Phelps—have both done honor to Dartmouth college, one as a student, the other as an instructor.

Every Dartmouth alumnus of more than a dozen years standing remembers the awe in which he held the keen observer whose name appeared in the college catalogue next to that of the president as professor of materia medica; and every younger graduate has admired the complete museum of medical botany which Dr. Phelps gave to the college.

But it was the world-famed discovery of Prof. Phelps of an infallible cure for those fearful fits that result from an impure nervous system and impure blood which has endeared the great doctor to the world, and made his life an era in the practice of medicine.

Prof. Phelps was born in Connecticut and graduated from the military school at Norwich, Vt. He studied medicine with Prof. Nathan Smith, of New Haven, Conn., and graduated in medicine at Yale.

In this book, which is "Cabinet des Modes," published in April, 1786, is first mentioned the Easter bonnet as "a black chapeau a la Maltese. It is bordered with a ribbon en diademe; the crown surrounded with a bunch of rose colored crapes, forming several knots; aigret formed of black cock's plumes and one large tuft of white plumes."

The remarkable hats published here with are from the papers of the period—viz., 1783, 1788 and 1794—and with them are worn the robe en fourreau, the robe en chemise and the redingote ajustee, and keen eyes can find many points of resemblance to our present modes.

In Peppy's "Diary," written in 1864, I find several mentions of Easter Sunday and services at church, and the dear old gossip says next to nothing of Easter bonnets—the nearest approach to it being where he says, "My wife dressed herself, it being Easter day," and speaks of her wearing "her new gown, which is indeed very fine with lace, and this morning her tailor brought home her other new laced silk gown, with a smaller lace and a new petticoat I bought the other day—both very pretty."

The fashion of Easter bonnets is more generally observed in this country than any other and in large cities more than in smaller places; still it has come to be a habit that all follow who can, and everywhere, if the weather is fine, new bonnets are seen.

Oliver Harper Writes of the Origin and Evolution of the Hats Worn by Our Grandmothers.

Probably nine persons out of ten, if asked how the habit of appearing in new garments, and particularly bonnets, on Easter Sunday originated, would speak of it as one evolved from a desire to commemorate in a measure the rising of our Lord, and to be clothed outwardly anew as a symbol of refreshed and renewed faith and a sign of rejoicing.

To say Easter bonnet brings to the mind the undefined sense of early spring, blue skies, the scent of lilacs, and out of this dim and misty haze materializes the image of a lovely girl with tender eyes heavy with reverent tears, standing mute and sweet in church, with a vision of beauty in the form of a mixture of lace and flowers and glistening ribbons overshadowing her brow.

The beginning of the Easter bonnet pure and simple is lost, for the Christian church took its rise in countries where women do not and never did wear bonnets. When after many centuries women began to wear a settled head covering, no particular importance was attached to Easter Sunday as requiring such an emblem, and it never has obtained in any countries but France, England and America, and of late years a very little in Italy.

THE SPRING BONNET.

WHY IT USUALLY BLOSSOMS FORTH ON EASTER SUNDAY.
