Last Friday's Storm.

According to accounts received Saturday the previous evening's storm spent most of its fury on the surrounding country. West and north-west the rain was accompanied by a very heavy wind and hail-stones as large as marbles. On the Mc Alpine farm, about two miles west, which is now owned by Mr. Jordan, son of Mr. Wm. Jordan, of Fenelon Falls, a large bank barn was w: ecked by the wind and portions of it scattered over a radius of many rods. The gale first tore off a section about 30 feet long from the north end and then ripped the balance of the building completely in at the way the beams were split and shivered .... On Mr. John Glenny's farm, near Little Britain, a per ion of a log barn was blown down, and rods of fencing were

London, April 20 .- The police are slowly but deftly weaving a close net around Mrs. Dyer, the baby farmer. They promise complete evidence two cases of baby murder, and intimate they will possibly connect her with the wholesale drowning of babies near London as well as at Reading The woman has escaped punishment on four previous accusations, Now she sees the gallows near at hand. Her nerve has apparently gone. She made a dejected hang-dog exhibition in the dock on Saturday, and in the prison since then has shown every sign of

One mother positively identifies one of the babies raked up from the river bottom, and the court was informed and another mother was ready to identify her drowned baby next week. The case will prove that the extra-ordinary beyond belief murderess in a calm and deliberate manner procured infants, and as is suspected often despatched them within a few hours after adopting them and promising to perform the part of a loving mother to them. It is supposed that she gained a handsome income during the last ten years for herself and son-in-law, exacting from $50 to $500 for each baby. Then she made more money by pawning the clothes of the bables. She would advertise a desire to adopt a young child and get into correspondence with single women in trouble, or two the entire length, one portion re- servants and working women who maining standing and the other being | were unable to take proper care of scattered broadcast. words her pen indited. Mothers who read of her plety, the lovely orchard and playground before the house, of the childless, lonely man and wife, were never able to again see their offspring. They were always put off from coming to the Dyers' house by one excuse or other, or Mrs. Dyer would move or change her name, until the parents, all too poor to give much time to their search. would abandon their tedious and futile

Palmer, the son in-law of Mrs. Dyer, has much to explain. It is known that he assisted Mrs. Dyer to carry a carpet bag, believed to have contained the two last bodies sunk in the river. Mrs. Dyer had gathered in two into his. It is believed she took one dead in the bag. The other, which was alive, stayed one night at Palmer's house. Mrs. Dyer started for her home the next day, when neither child was carried the bag. Palmer is not definitely connected with this crime, but the police now swear they found in his house the clothing of one of the identified babies, and also ten pawn tickets for the effects of the other bables.

"There are times when circulars and booklets and such things are wise and profitable investments, but when a newspaper can be used to advantage, it is very much better, and very much cheaper. Circulation in newspapers is the cheapest that can be had. You can give an equal space more circulation in the newspaper for a given amount of money than you can with dodgers."

Jersey City clergyman, who was spending the winter at New Smyrna, announcing that she might find a clue to her husband in Florida. Mrs. Conway immediately came south, accompanied by her son, now a young man. She reached here Thursday, and learned that the man thought to be her husband was known as "The Hermit of the Peninsula," who lived in a lonely spot across the river from New Smyrna. Fifteen years ago this man arrived here, when the east coast was a wilderness. Shunning the few settlers, he bought a few acres on the Peninsula, built a cottage and lived as a hermit. He was kindly mannered and pure in life, but kept aloof from all persons, especially Northern tourists.

Friday Mrs. Conway, accompanied by her son and the Jersey City clergyman, went to the hermit's cottage. They found the to the hermit's cottage. They found the recluse standing before a portrait of Mrs. Conway, as she appeared when a bride. With a sob, Mrs. Conway said, 'Albert!" The hermit turned, gave a loud cry, and caught his faithful wife as she fainted. After explanations the reunited couple returned here, where they are stopping for a few days before going north.

In explaining his disappearance, Conway said his mind gave way under pressure of business, and he wandered away, not knowing what he was doing. He came to Florida and settled, but it was nearly a year before he realized what had happened. When his mind became clear he was ashamed to return, and continued to live as a recluse until discovered by his wife.
