The large church was crowded to its fullest capacity, many leading prc-Essional and business men from other churches being in attendancs.

His lordship, in opening his lecture, said that as all were no doubt aware, he had recently paid a visit to Rome, and all would like to hear a description of its magnificent churches, picturesque monuments and many places of interest in the Exmal City. It would be impossible for him to even briefly mention the 400 churches, shrines and holy places possessing an interest for Catholies the world over. To do so would weary their patience, but he would cover the ground as thoroughly as 'ine would permit.
