LINDSAY, FRIDAY, MAY 22, 1891.

SHE IS A FIGHTING EDITOR.

Miss Dortch Knows How to Reply to Rival's Insinuations. Miss Ellen Dortch, a graduate of Mount St. Mary's Academy, Maryland, is publishing a weekly paper in Franklin County, Georgia, where she has the county printing. That she is able to take care of herself is developed in a recent issue of her sheet. Landon McConnell has lately started an opposition newspaper. Miss Dortch thus hanlles him: "The Tribune has heretofore endeavored to preserve pleasant relations with the person (we use the term 'person' advisedly) whose name heads this column. Now, Mr. McConnell has made the awarding of the public printing a pretext for serving up an article the most offensive and repugnant that man with white skin who claims to have a heart of the same color can offer to a woman who is independent, young, and strong. That he seized upon a few hasty and inconsiderate words of the grand jury, and thereupon colored and built his tale, is no excuse for the insult offered. The man who offends without intending to do so is not culpable, but the man who dishes up that offense and offers it to the public through the columns of a newspaper, and then crawle behind the innocent offender and says, 'He did it, not I,' holds himself up to the public gaze as a most contemptible coward. In branding Mr. McConnell a contemptible coward I have no intention of doing him an injustice. I think the sequel will prove that my assertion is correct. McConnell wishes to crawl behind the grand jury as a cloak in order to escape all censure, and hold us up to the public as receiving support because of our sex, environments, etc., and pose himself as a martyr to justice and to chivalry towards women.

better paper than any man has ever printed in Carnesville, and that our circulation entitles us to vastly more of the public patronage than we are at present receiving. Knowing all this, only a coward would urge through the columns of a newspaper our sex as an excuse for patronage that honest, conscientious hard work entitles us to. That he did it behind the cloak of the grand jury is evidence of his double cowardice. O, no; we have received nothing because of our sex, and Mr. McConnell knows it. He knows, furthermore, that the man who would come to the Tribune office and offer such a support would get a sound cowhiding. Now, Mr. McConnell must rise up and designate the men who had sinister motives in supporting the Tribune. He must state what those sinister motives were, what axes they had to grind. Hints and threats and suspicions will not answer here. He will make an open and full statement or he will hold himself up to the public eye not only as a contemptible but as a falsifying coward. It may be pleasant to Mr. McConnell's sympathetic and chivalrous nature to know that I have at this moment at my disposal a lucrative position in my chosen field of labor in a Northern city, and in a Western city, and also in a Georgia city. It may be interesting to Mr. McConnell to know that propose to stay in Carnesville and witness his efforts to kill the Tribune."

Therefore I have dubbed him a coward.

"No one understands more clearly than

Mr. Landon J. McConnell that we print a

In view of the fact that it was proposed to have a landing at the foot of Peel-st., where the turning point for steamers was now being dredged, it was feit generally that the council should purchase Mr. McConnell's river lot and erect a suitable wharf-in no way could $1,000 be spent to better advantage....Mr. Hopkins said that considerable sums were coming into the treasury from the sale of Queen's square property, and he thought the town could not do better than purchase the lot at $800, if only as an investment....
