PROGRESS.

The friends of woman suffrage are gratified and encouraged by a speech made by Lord Salisbury at Edinburgh on December 1st, in which that nobleman expressed a hope that the day was not far distant when women will best their share in voting and determining the policy of the country. He furthersaid that he knew of no argumen, by which they should be excluded, it being obvious that they are as fit to possess the right of suffrage as many others in point of knowledge, training, character, influence and favor for morality and religion.

THE ROOT OF ALL EVIL.

SHEEP WORKING DOGS .- One morning city, Mrs. McAuliffe, asked, in a recent incrime among the women under her care "Cheep drink." The women often tell her that they can get trusted for all the drinks they want at saloons. They serve a short sentence for being drunk, go out, and probably the next day will find them in again. "Drink," says the matron, "is the root of all evil. Every crime, every wreng deed is the result of drink. And sending women to the Island does more to promote the evil than anything else." "No woman," she adds, "who serves a term on the Island ever reforms," These unfortunate women become helpless slaves of the drnk appetite, and sacrifice everything for it. The state owes them protection by cosing the doors of temptation, and sheltered homes, with industrial opportunities, should be provided for them. They are neglected and ostracised by society at its ewn peril.
