Quits the Position. ANNUAL MEETING IN LONDON

A Large Attendance of Shareholders and a Good Deal of Excitement-Other Directors also Resign - The Meeting Adjourned for a Week.

Montreal, May 1.—The Star special cable report of the annual meeting of the Grand Trunk Railway Company in London says: The anxiously awaited annual meeting of the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada took place here yesterday. It was a packed one and great excitement prevailed. When Sir Henry Tyler, who presided, arose he announced the resignation of himself and the board of directors. He was received with cheers and groans from the different sections of the meeting. Sir Henry Tyler said he had presided for the forty-sixth and last time. This statement was greeted with more cheers, and silence on the part of his friends. The board of directors held a meeting yesterday morning previous to the annual meeting. It was reported to shareholders had secured a majority of examinations Their convocation takes the proxies against the board. The board, | place first thing in the fall. however, held the opinion that this had been accomplished by means of an unfair and misleading circular. The board also charges that the committee of shareholders have published an abstract which differs in many respects from the Barker report, and does not fairly convey its substance. In a separate circular which had previously been issued the lirectors asked for the support of the prorietors and, referring to the opposition, they stated: This agitation is carried on by a self-constituted committee without authority from the general body of proprietors and appears to be mainly comented by these baving comparatively small interests in the company. The gen: eral effect of their allegations is that the present unfortunate condition of the company is due to mismanagement, whereas it will be obvious to all impartial proprictors, not only that it is due to circum: stances entirely beyond the control of the board, or of the management in Canada, but also that every possible exertion has been made by the strictest economy, to

The meeting, which was held at the Sent to any part of Canada | City Terminus Hotel, Cannon street, E. C., lasted two hours and was most exciting. Sir Henry Tylers speech was a long one and was principally a justification of the acquisit on of the Chicago and Grand Trunk road. He gave the charge of concealment laid against the board a warm denial. It was absolutely necessary first that efforts should be made to reduce the expenses of the company in consequence of the great losses incurred by the passenger and freight accounts. Under great stress and by rigid economy the expenses had been reduced by cutting the train service. This alone had saved £172,500, and during the whole year the expenses had been reduced about £135,000, against a loss of receipts of £418,000. These extraordinary savings had been made in the expenses of a railway that had always economy. A P. P. A. PAPER BARRED. The Committee of the Hamilton Public Library Against It,

Hamilton, May 1.-An important meeting of the library committee of the publie library was held Monday, the object of which was to consider a request that the A. P. A. journal of Michigan, called the Patriotic American, be placed on the file in the library reading room. The journal was presented to the library by the publisher, a Detroit man, but was not put on file on account of objections taken by George Lynch Staunton, one of the heard. The March number of the Patriotic American contained a cartoon on the subject of the beyout instituted by the Roman Catholic church in the United States against the secret societies and the figure of the Pope appeared in the background of the pleture, Mr. Staunton claimed that the paper was both abusive and insulting and should be given no room in the library. Mr. W. H. Fricker pressed the claims of the A. P. A. journal to a place in the library files and said the Catholic Record and other Catholic papers were on file there. The committee decided to recommend that the paper be not placed on file, but some of the committee did not concur in the report and when the full board meets the Simcoe, May 1.—The spring sittings of the High Court, with a jury, was opened here yesterday before Mr. Justice Rose, Mr. Alfred S. Ball, of Woodstock, conducting the crown business. Four cases only were on the civil list. The first one, Brandor vs. Rockeyfellow, an action for damages for the seduction of plaintiff's daughter, was settled out of court.

Pecker vs. Dedrick-W. E. Kelly for plaintiff applied to have this trial, which was an action brought for damages for organizer of the Egyptian Finances, and | false imprisonment, adjourned on the ness. An order was made postponing the trial to next court on payment by plainpresidency of the company which the tiff within thirty days of all costs. If costs are not paid by that time the action to be dismissed with costs. Dredge vs. Williams was an action brought to recover back $1,000 paid to defendant for maintenance of plaintiff during his lifetime on the ground of a breach of the contract. A settlement was made on the suggestion of the judge.

The case of Robertson vs. Teeter, an action on a promissory note, about which a good deal has already been printed in the newspapers, was settled between the parties by the action being dismissed Without costs, neither party to the suit receding from the position taken by him

The only criminal case was one bigamy charged against John W. Shaw. Who was defended by Mr. W. E. Rolly. The crown not being ready his lordship ordered the prisoner to be discharged upon his own recognicance in $600 to appear for trial when called upon. This closed the business of the court.

Hon. Mr. Foster would not promise Hon, Mr. Laurier said the House and the country would regret the course taken by the Government in this matter, Hon, Mr. Mills said it was the business of the House to see to it that the Govern: ment did not commit treason against the country. The Government was incapable, he said, and drifting without a head, They were afmid to say whether they would give the Hudson's Bay Fallway two millions or not. The Order-in-Council was passed; why did they fear to say what was done. Hon. Mr. Foster then formally explained the Cabinet changes, merely following the explanations given by the Premier last week in the Senate. He said that the Governor-General had first sent for Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who at once undertook the task of forming a Cabinet.

Hon. Mr. Laurier said that Sir Frank Smith had been interviewed by the Government organs after Sir John Thompson's death and had claimed that the Governor had sent for him, and that he had recommended him to send for Sir Mackenzie Bowell. This, according to Mr. Foster, was not true. Mr. Foster had not even mentioned Sir Frank Smith's name in connection with the matter. It was quite possible, and indeed probable, and it might have happened that Sir Frank Smith had not been consulted by the Governor, but had had a confidential conversation, a private interview; but to go as he had done and exhibit his own self-sufficient importance was, to say the least, nothing but an impertinent vulgarity. In that impertinence there was a design. It was done to do service for the Government party. It was evident to Sir Mackenzie Bowell that the impression might be entertained in the country that the Orange color was rather predominant in the formation of the new Cabinet. It was well known that Sir Mackenzie Bowell had all his life been an active member of the Orange order, and it was deemed a clever trick for a Roman Catholic to give his certificate of character

He had threatened to resign when the remedial order was passed. "No fear of that. There are five thousand golden reasons why he stress on the young man's "being natural won't resign" (loud laughter). He would not resign so long as the salary held out. The House then went into Committee of Supply and spent the balance of the day attempting to pass one item. The Reformers held a caucus yesterday morning and it was soon preceptible that they had decided to block proceedings until the Government is forced to say whether or not they are giving the Hudson's Bar Rallwar Company money, and until the Government states whether or not it will grant additional railway sub-

Hon. M. Foster promised that no supplement ary estimates would be brought down for next year. All he would ask in addition to the estimates already down would be a small amount to pay expenses from now till the end of June next. This caused great enthusiasm in the Opposition ranks.

Mr. McMullen then took up the estimates and showed that the 4,480 civil servants received an average salary of over $800 a year. This was more than ministers of gospel, teachers, bank, wholesale or retail clerks received on an average. He asked why should this be. Dr. Sproule has given notice of a bill

Some have left our ranks, more will leave, but this will not prevent the Government from carrying out its purposes. This I tell you in the name of my colleagues."

A ludierous touch is given to the proceedings by the manner in which he casts his eye over his shoulders, as if to assure himself that he will not meet with any dangerous obstruction. The members follow the Speaker, and the procession passes through the chamber and inner and outer lobbies. A number of policemen scattered about the building now yell themselves hoarse, "Make way for Black Rod." Across the tessellated floor of the House the procession moves, through the lobby

The election of the new speaker is announced and a hope is expressed that he will be acceptable to Her Majesty, whereupon the Lord Chancellor assures the Commoners of Her Majesty's gracious pleasure, and extends her congratulations to both House and the Speaker. This is the first shot in the battle which so to be waged for six or seven months. The day begins in angry debate. Thus rapidly is the scene of Great Britain.

Shakespeare's Young Men,

There are between twenty and thirty young men in the non-historical plays, and an examination of their peculiarities and characteristics enables us to form some conception of Shakespeare's own object in swearing falsely. The judge ideal of young manhood.

In the first place, it is noticeable what physical perfection they are all supposed new Ministry, Toronto had again been to have. The poet's young hero should, as a general thing, "laugh merrily," like allowed to remain sitting on the steps of Valentine, "eat and drink heartily, walk manfully, and only look sad when his purse is empty." He should be able to true. At present he was studying con- , "climb walls with Romeo, wrestle like Orlando, fence and fight pirates like Hamlet, or swim through the stormy waves like Ferdinand; and he should enjoy doing it." Further, Shakespeare seems to lay unaffected, as if to him affectation indicated a weakness somewhere in the man's character." Indeed, no characteristic of Shakespeare's is more conspicuous than his thorough openness and honesty-his contempt for everything that savers of affectation or sham. Note his repeated sharp hits at false hair and paint in women, at foppery and sping of foreign fashions in men, at the small concelt of travelers who came home, as Resalind sars, "to lisp and wear strange suits, disable all the benefits of their own country, and he out of love with their nativity," who have seen much, yet have nothing from it worth the setting. He has the same distike for the affected and artificial style of the day in speech and writing. How he delights to show it up in his earliest plays no less than in the later ones. How he gradually freed him: saif from the rhetorical conceits and mannorisms of the time-the excessive playing upon words, the running of a metaphor into the ground, so to speak, the overindulgance in classical allusions, and the like. How he pricks all swollen pretense and pomposity! How he burlesques the ranting of the actor, and the extravagance of the dramatist who furnishes him with the fictitious passion to tear in tatters! His dislike for Puritans, which crops out in a few passages, appears to have been due to their canting ways 1. ther than their peculiar tenets.

Again, Shakespeare "seems to value very highly a decided capacity for friendship between men." This is also eminently characteristic of the man. As a friend he himself must have been capable of measureless personal devotion. The first 126 sonnets, most of which are addressed to one and the same friend-a man, not a woman-would suffice to prove this, if we had nothing else from his pen. But we have also the striking pictures of ripe fruit, in prime condition, only that is manly friendship in the plays; and some of these-for instance. that of Antonio and Bassanio, of Brutus and Cassius, of Hamlet and Horatio-are perhaps unsurpassed by any of his delineations of the love of man and woman.

THE WILDE TRIAL All the Evidence in The Prisoner Causes

Cheers in Court: London, May 1 .- The Old Balley was less crowded restorday morning when the court opened for what was expected to be the last day of the trial of Oscar Wilde and Alfred Taylor, Wilds was placed upon the stand and absolutely denied that there was a word of truth in the charges of indeency brought against him.

Sir Edward Clarke claimed that Wilde was a martyr and that he had accepted a verdict of "not guilty" in the Queensberry case only because it was evident that it could not be properly tried then. C. F. Gill on behalf of the presecution began his cross-examination on the same lines as that of Edward M. Carson, Q.C., and quoted from the Sonnet to Lord Alfred Douglas, in which occurred the line: "I am that love; but, dare not speak its name." Mr. Gill asked what was the nature of the love represented in that poem. Wilde, with marked deliberation and emphasis, answered: "It is a love not understood in this century. It is the love of David and Jonathan. A deep, spiritual affection as pure as it is perfect. It is something this age does not understand. It mocks at it and sometimes puts As Wilde finished his answer, there were loud cheers from the gallery, which called forth a rebuke from the judge. The evidence for the defence was finished in the afternoon when Sir Richard Clarke addressed the jury in behalf of .Wilde. The only direct evidence against peace and harmony; it ends in fierce and | Wilde, he declared, was the testimony of three blackmailers. An important Caution with Regard to the BUTTON OF FEBRE Fruit skins carry gorms and are no more intended for human sustenance than potato skins, moion rinds or pos pods. The bloom of the peach is a luxuriant growth of microbes, that of grape only less so; and when these skins are taken into the stomach they find most favorable conditions for their lively and rapid develorment which cause the decay of the fruit before it is possible to digest it. This is the reason many persons think they cannot cat raw fruit. If they would in all cases discard the skin they could derive only good from the fruit itself. Nature provides the skin for the

of orms which are ever ready to attack is evidenced when the skin is bruisbroken in any way. The microbes at once begin their work of decay, and the fruit is unfit for food. Children are chief offenders in respect to this rule and should be carefully cautioned. A daintiness as to the condition of fruit should also be cultivated, to prevent its being eaten unripe, or too old, on the verge of decay. Remember that it is sweet and recommnded.-Farmers' Voice.
