Only the Scars Remain.

Among the many testimonials which I have received in regard to certain medicines performing cures, cleansing the blood, etc., writes HENRY HENSON, of the James Smith Woolen Machinery Co., Philadelphia, Pa., "none impress me more than my own case. Twenty years ago, at the age of 18 years, I had swellings come on my legs, which broke and became running sores. Our family physician could do me no good, and it was feared that the bones would be affected. At last, my good old mother urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles, the sores healed, and I have not been troubled since. Only the scars remain, and the memory of the past, to remind me of the good Ayer's Sarsaparilla has done me. I now weigh two hundred and twenty pounds, and am in the best of health. I have been on the road for the past twelve years, and have noticed Ayer's Sarsaparilla advertised in all parts of the United States, and always take pleasure in telling what good it did for me."

For the cure of all diseases originating in impure blood, the best remedy is

A MEXICAN BELLE.

day: plain and untrimmed, very unlike the dresses which fashion prescribed, but the very simplicity of its lines setting off the beauty of her figure, darkening by contrast the shadows in her hair and in the depths of her eyes. She had also taken out one of her broad leaf-hats; it lay beside her on the table: she felt herself almost back in Mexico. On seeing her appear thus attired, Gabrielle had burst into loud expressions of admiration. This, however, had been in the morning; now Gabrielle was upstairs in her room taking an afternoon sleep, and had late become a daily habit.

Reata sat quite alone down here, for the Baron was in his writing-room, and Arnold had not returned: she took up her pen again and went on with her letter.

"How I wish the marriage were over! There is only a fortnight more now. It is so lucky he is so far off, so there is no danger of my seeing him again. By the time he comes I shall be safely buried in my cloister, and I shall have done with the world, and done with secrets for ever. They will hardly believe when they are told that."

Here Reata paused suddenly, and lifted her head; it was a noise in the distance which had caught her ear, no more than the sound of wheels coming down the avenue. She rose and took her hat to go out and tell her to come in softly, as Gabrielle was asleep; she well knew that his rapid, resounding step was enough to awaken a sounder sleeper than Gabrielle. She had not spoken to Arnold since he had left the balcony last night, and she went out now to meet him, with some curiosity as to his looks and words.

Arnold sprang from the dog-cart hastily, more hastily than usual; and then, to Reata's slight surprise, the vehicle, instead of going round to the stables, turned and drove again down the avenue. Seeing Reata on the balcony, he came up the wooden steps quickly towards her, two steps at a time, and he was near her in half a minute; but even as he was springing up, Reata saw there was some change in his face, some expression that looked like anxiety.

"Will you come in quietly, please, and do not speak loud! Gabrielle is asleep upstairs," and she looked at him from under the shadow of her big hat which she had put on when she came out.

"She is not worse, is she?" he asked, gravely.

"No, no, just the same as usual; but she was tired, and has gone to sleep."

Arnold looked relieved, but that anxious shade in his eyes had not gone yet. They had walked back to the room. "He does not ask whether Hermine has gone," she thought to herself.

"I have been to G— to-day," he said, abruptly, "and I have seen Professor K— about Gabrielle; he is coming out here to-morrow." Arnold paused; Reata looked at him surprised, almost touched. "After what you said last night, I thought it necessary to get some higher medical opinion about her."

Reata was a little ashamed of her outbreak yesterday. She had been ashamed of it before, and now the feeling depended, but she could not say a word to show it; even had she wished, the words would not have come. She sat silent and a little embarrassed, wanting very much to make some remark about the doctor's visit, but not feeling quite sure of her own voice. Arnold did not wait for an answer, he had still something to say; he began walking up and down with his hand behind his back and his eyes on the ground, the surest sign of preoccupation with him. When he had made two turns he stopped before her, and without looking at her, said in a jerky, rather urgent tone of voice, "I suppose you are a cousin of mine, and I didn't rude last night to Gabrielle, and I didn't know she was ill. I am sorry you should have such a bad opinion of me."

Reata, started out of all her presence of mind by this unexpected speech, began stammering some incoherent reply. Arnold had turned, and was walking about again. "It was good of you to go for the doctor at once," she managed at last to say, tolerably composedly. "Is that why the dog-cart has gone back?"

THE SUBJECT OF SINCERE CONGRATULATIONS FROM HER FRIENDS.

Was Thought to be Sinking into a Hopeless Decline—How Her Restoration to Health Was Brought About—An Example Worthy of Imitation by Other Young Ladies.

From the Sherbrooke Gazette.

A number of reports have reached the Gazette office of many cures effected by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. To satisfy a legitimate public curiosity about a fact which, if true, should be proclaimed to suffering humanity, the Gazette requested a reporter to go to Rock Forest and investigate the facts in the case of Miss Maggie Simpson, who was said to have been restored from a very low condition.

The reporter took the afternoon train for Rock Forest and, after a short walk from the C. P. R. station, reached Mr. James Simpson's home, situated on a well cultivated farm beautifully located on the banks of the Magog River.

Upon communicating the purpose of his visit the reporter was informed by Mrs. Simpson that her daughter was, at that time, absent at the Sherbrooke Convent, where he might easily interview her. She spoke with the warmth of genuine gratitude of her daughter's cure, strongly corroborating the facts obtained later from the young lady herself. She told him that she lost no opportunity to recommend the Pink Pills, and that, as an immediate result, Miss Delaney, a near neighbor of theirs, had also been recently rescued from premature decline by their use.

Upon his return to Sherbrooke the reporter called upon Miss Maggie Simpson at the Congregation de Notre Dame Convent. Miss Simpson is a handsome blonde of seventeen years, of prepossessing manners and winsome address, whose clear, rosy complexion, full, round, merry face and bright eyes are a source of delight to the beholder. Miss Simpson had no hesitation in candidly stating that had brought her to her present happy state of health, of which she is the very picture. She expressed herself as follows:—

"Since the age of fourteen up to last spring I had been gradually losing health and strength, without our doctor being able to do anything to help me. For a year preceding my case got to be desperate. I was constantly troubled with headache; my lips were of a livid paleness and sometimes perfectly blue for want of blood; I had to gasp for breath upon the least exertion; I had become a living skeleton and had lost my strength to the extent that I was unable to walk upstairs. I had become discouraged when my doctor could not offer any relief and I found that I was rapidly sinking into a hopeless decline.

"A friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but I had tried in vain so many different kinds of medicine that I lost confidence in any further experiment. Very fortunately my mother insisted upon my trying the pills. It was but a short time before I could see that they were doing me good. I continued to use them without interruption, and when I had taken six boxes I was completely restored to my former perfect health and strength. My mother, however, insisted that I should continue the use of the pills until I had since used nine boxes. This I had finished taking some time last summer.

"When I returned to the convent, at the opening this autumn, after a long absence through my illness, those girls who had previously known me were astounded at the transformation that had taken place. I frequently have occasion to be amused by the amazement of former friends and acquaintances that I now chance to meet. I can tell you I don't lose an opportunity of recommending Pink Pills to them. I always keep a box on hand, and whenever any of my convent friends are ill I am always ready with a sure remedy. When the girls, who they often do, make the remark to me 'Oh, Maggie, you are a fortunate girl to be so happy and jolly,' I tell them I am making up for lost time."

The gratifying results following the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, in the case of Miss Simpson, prove that they are unequalled as a blood builder and nerve tonic. In the case of young girls who are pale and sallow, listless, troubled with a fluttering or palpitation of the heart, weak and easily tired, no time should be lost in taking a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which will speedily enrich the blood, and bring a rosy glow of health to the cheeks. These pills are a positive cure for all troubles arising from a vitiated condition of the blood or shattered nervous system, such as locomotor ataxia, nervous paralysis, St. Vitus dance, sciatica, partial paralysis, St. Vitus dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, the tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration, all diseases depending upon humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. In the case of men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and Schenectady, N. Y., and are sold in boxes (never in loose form) by the dozen or hundred) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Company at either address. The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment comparatively inexpensive as compared with other remedied or medical treatment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrup, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. Osceola,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

Dr. J. F. Kitchin,
Conway, Ar.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. Archer, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

LONDON, May 21st.—William Langley, of London, south, contracted inflammation of the kidneys last fall, which finally developed into Bright's disease. As any man would, who was afflicted with this disease, Mr. Langley tried every remedy that could be suggested. His experience was the same as all others, he got no relief until he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Then a change set in. Mr. Langley at once began to improve, and now he is cured. This is another case of Bright's disease, one considered incurable, that has had to succumb to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Of every 10,000 deaths in England 270 are from Bright's disease.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK.

—Lightning entered the house of Mr. McIntosh on the Pipe Line road in South Lindsay on Thursday morning of last week. A grown-up daughter was standing in the doorway of one of the rooms and received the full force of the shock in her face. A large piece of flesh was completely gouged out of her cheek and almost all lower teeth knocked out. Of course Mrs. McIntosh was knocked senseless, and the other members of the household were thought for dead. Several doctors were telephoned for, and at last accounts the chances were in favor of her recovery. The young woman believes that she was the swallowed several teeth, that she was afraid of lightning and no one else in the house was struck, although there were several standing around. The clock in another room was knocked down and the dial broken. After the bolt left the other woman it went in two directions, striking a woman it went in two directions, knocking a hole out of the side of the house and the other broke several boards in the floor.

Only the Scars Remain.

Among the many testimonials which I have received in regard to certain medicines performing cures, cleansing the blood, etc., writes HENRY HENSON, of the James Smith Woolen Machinery Co., Philadelphia, Pa., "none impress me more than my own case. Twenty years ago, at the age of 18 years, I had swellings come on my legs, which broke and became running sores. Our family physician could do me no good, and it was feared that the bones would be affected. At last, my good old mother urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles, the sores healed, and I have not been troubled since. Only the scars remain, and the memory of the past, to remind me of the good Ayer's Sarsaparilla has done me. I now weigh two hundred and twenty pounds, and am in the best of health. I have been on the road for the past twelve years, and have noticed Ayer's Sarsaparilla advertised in all parts of the United States, and always take pleasure in telling what good it did for me."

For the cure of all diseases originating in impure blood, the best remedy is the keynote of the silent humble worship which made her hang on every word and look of Arnold's, that placid feeling of admiration and confidence which seems to be so far apart from passion, but which is true as passion, sometimes truer, and as strong, for it has grown up with heart's own growth.

Reata looked at her as she leaned there in the darkness, and then she left the balcony noiselessly, as if not to disturb Gabrielle and went up-stairs to look for Gabrielle and comfort her, as she lay sobbing on her bed.

CHAPTER XXIII.—AN ARRIVAL.

Hermine remained at Steinbuhl till next afternoon, but Arnold was not there; he had left home early, before anybody had seen or spoke to him, merely leaving a message which said that he would be back that afternoon—nothing about the business which took him away. The family were used to these sudden disappearances. Arnold often had to go off in this way to G— without warning; and nobody thought anything of it this time, except, perhaps, Hermine, who was seated from the window watching the windmill whether Arnold would be back from the woods. But Arnold was not when the Scherwendorf carriage came to fetch her.

"You must come back again soon," said Gabrielle, who all that day had lain on the sofa, exhausted by her hysterical fits tears last night. "You must come back very soon and stay a long time—a week or ten days; this time I have not been able to enjoy your visit, and it is all Arnold's fault."

"Hush," said Hermine, as she stopped Gabrielle with a kiss.

After the Scherwendorf had driven away, Reata sat in the sitting-room, writing. It was a letter begun some days before, for she was fond of writing in scraps, just as the fancy moved her, adding a phrase now and then. It was a long letter, this one; she was just beginning the second sheet, having finished the other with a graphic description of Madame de Scherwendorf, which I will not give, as she has been so fully described already.

"The daughter is not at all like the mother," the second sheet began; "she has large yellow hair, and large blue eyes that look sleepy usually; but yesterday I saw them for a moment not looking sleepy, and they were lovely then—it was like looking down into a well of deep blue water; usually they look like forget-me-nots. She is very handsome but too large, she looks as if she had been made a size larger by mistake. I don't think she could lose her temper if she tried. I wonder if men always like women to be as sweet-tempered as that?—certainly Arnold Bodenbach does, for he is engaged to marry her. They do not talk about it much, and there seems to be no time fixed for the marriage yet; they want to wait a little, as they think her too young, I believe—just nineteen. Baron Arnold is not always sweet tempered himself, so perhaps it is by way of contrast that he likes her."

"I have not heard from you yet, and I am longing for a letter. Do write often, but don't send me about anything, and remember to go on addressing as I told you."

"I hope you will be able to come out this summer as you promised; perhaps you would also like to become a nun, and enter into the same convent with me. It was a splendid idea! For of course I am going into a convent, as I told you in last letter, as soon as the wedding is over and Gabrielle is better. I could not leave her just yet."

Having reached this point in her letter, Reata laid down her pen and reflected. "I wonder whether Gabrielle will be able to come and see me there? I supposed visitors are allowed. Otto and his wife shall never come; but perhaps the old Baron, and perhaps Arnold. I suppose when I am a nun I won't quarrel with him any more; and Hermine—will Hermine come with him also, I wonder?"
