Every Housekeeper

and every houseowner should be interested in paint. There are little things about every paint. There are little things about every house that ought to be painted, but you don't paint them, because you don't know just how to go about it. We know your difficulties, and have prepared a booklet to meet them. It is called prepared a booklet to meet them. It tells "Paint Points." It will fit your case. It tells the best paint for indoor use, the best paint for outdoor use; for floors, for bath tubs, for barns, fences, roofs, for houses, for chairs, tables, settees, for anything that can be painted. It is free. Send for it.

A Family Tiff. Our readers will no doubt remember the Murphy family, of Mt. Horeb, who were concerned in the issue of counterfeit coin last year. One of the brothers was sent to prison, Levi being allowed to remain at home to take care of his father and sister. Shortly after the trial another son, John, arrived home from the west with his earaings, and has since helped to maintain the family, but had the bad luck to arouse the jealousy of Lavi, and last week the latter pitched into John, the sister attacked Levi, and a very pretty family jar resulted in the Crawford visited the happy home on Fri day evening, arrested Lavi, and the other members of the family appeared at the trial before Col. Deacon on Saturday. The son with the scriptural handle to his name was committed to jail, being unable to furnish sureties that he would keep the

An Enterprising Youngster Master Roy, the seven year-old son Mrs. R. D. Thexton, of the north ward, 1: not merely a precoclous youngster-he possesses firmness and pluck far beyond his years, and these qualities have on several occasions attracted public attention to the young gentleman. A case in point occurred on Saturday. Happining to visit the lock, he learned that the Sar. Crandella was to leave for Port Perry about 3 o'clock, and he promptly decided to take in the trip and make his way to Blackstock to visit his uncle, Col. John Hughes, but omitted to inform his mother or companions of his intention, and trouble came of it. Getting on board, he concealed himself until the steamer nad reached the lake, and it was impossible to put him ashore, so Capt. Frank Crandell consoled himself with the reflection that he would send a message from Port. Tha vessel did not arrive at her destination till 11 o'clock, and the captain found it impossible to get connection with Lindsay Falls. The prices are reasonable, and as the steamer will call at Pleasant Point, the steamer will call at Pleasant Point, sturgeon Point and Blyth, no doubt an increased business will be assured this increased business will be assured this walk, his mother in Lindsay became aware of his absence, and upon finding that he was not at any of the neighbors' houses she became alarmed and enlisted the services of Mr. R. Miller and others to hunt for him. They learned that he had been seen about the river during the after-noon, and thinking he might have gone to the Point or Bobcaygeon on the Beaubo-cage or some other craft, Mr. Miller and some friends started down the river on the steam yacht Victoria. kindly placed at their disposal by the Messre. Horn Bros., but of course no trace of the wanderer was obtained either at the Point or Bob caygeon. While they were away other parties searched the river banks with the sorrowful conviction that the young lad had met a watery grave, but the grief of the mother was changed into joy about 2 o'clock, when a telegram from Port Perry reached her. The young lad, captain asking that his trunk be forward-ed, as he intended remaining two or three
