MEN MARGONED ON A GEORGIAN BAY ISLAND.

HERIT FORF BASS WHESHE FORG - THOS Were Thinking of Killing a Heres

Now and again stories appear in print that are calculated to impress the reador with the dangers and hardships surrounding the riverdriver's and shants man's career, and we think the story related below well worthy of publication as furnishing another instance of the perils attending their hazardous calling. It was told our reporter the other day by Mr. N. McEachren, a wellknown resident of Hartley, who hired last fall with Mr. Thompson, lumberman, of Hamilton, to work in his Spanish River camps, on the north shore of Georgian Bay, Algoma dis-

The Trip to the Camp.

The gang of men McEachren joined left Biscotasing for French River on Nov. 3rd in an "Alligator" boat, which had three small timber cribs loaded with shanty supplies in tow. Twelve miles from Biscotasing they reached a long island opposite the entrance into Spanish lake, over which the Alligator was drawn by means of cables worked by the machinery, as it was impossible to navigate the marshy channels on both sides of the island owing to the low state of the water. Mc-Eachren and two companions were horses to transfer the supplies on the cribs to the other side of the island, while the Aliigator left with the men Spanish River, the understanding being that the craft was to return for the remainder of the gang and the bulk of the supplies early next day.

frost, but as McEachren and his comrades worked all night transferring the supplies they did not feel at all uncomfortable. In the morning, while they were eating the last of their pork and beans, they noticed a thin film of ice on the channels on each side of the Post. island, and the thought struck them that if the narrows higher up the river had frozen over after the passage of the Alligator they were in a very unpleasant predicament. Now that their task was done they suffered from the increasing cold, and soon they began to experience the pangs of hunger which they allayed somewhat by chewing gum scraped off the trees That night was so cold they were obliged to walk about to keep the blood in circulation, and in the morning they looked in vain, however, and then set partridge on the island, and at these of what it costs him to produce 1,000 they hurled stones until tired, but did single 2-lb. loaves of bread: not succeed in killing any. Then they espied a rabbit which fled to its burrow, and though they stood by the opening with clubs for a couple of hours, bunny did not venture forth.

They were Starving Men. Another day and night was passed in m'sery, the weather having become bitterly cold. In the morning Mc-Eachren proposed swimming across to the main shore, as the ice in the channels had been broken up by a gale from the lake, but his companions were too weak to make the effort, and if they succeeded they would probably perish in one of the marshes beyond.

The Work of the Rescuers. In the meantime Foreman Archie Mc- Gas light Neill, when he started to return for the men and supplies the morning after leaving the island, found the narrows frozen to a thickness of nearly two inches. He lost a day trying to cut a passage with axes and saws, and then started off through the bush for Romsay, the nearest telegraph station from which he sent a message to Biscotasing describing the situation and giving instructions for the rescue of the men. When the telegram arrived the party ordered to start thought the lake was too rough, and delayed the trip till mext day. To Kill a Horse for Food. When the rescuer reached the island next morning the men were famishing, and on the point of killing one of the horses. They had been four days and four nights without food, and were so weak as to be almost unable to stand; :Two of them had their ears badly frozen, and one, who dispensed with stockings, had a couple of toes touched and a sore had broken out. They were taken back to Bisco, where they received every attention, and a week later joined their companions at the camp.

COMMUNICATIONS

Are They Afraid to Act? (To The Editor of The Post.)

Sir,-A great many complaints, were made last year that in consequence of the indifference or obstinacy of parties using the river, steamboat owners and the public in general were put to great inconvenience by the river being kept blocked by logs so frequently that very much delay was almost daily caused to boats and travellers. It seems that neither our town council or board of trade has as yet seen fit to take any action towards remedying this ser-

Capt. Diament says that the Esturion cannot get to the town wharf until the river is kept clear, and he complains that no proper authority has th's year interfered to prevent the nuisance or punish the offfenders - Yours, CITIZEN.

Elevate the Bridge.

(To The Editor of The Post.) Everybody is pleased to see the new steel bridge being put into place. It is easy now to see how it can be improved. It is a great pity that some means could not be devised to have it kept at the height that if now is, instead of lowering it after it is all put together. Two-and-a-half feet of stonework added to the top of the abutments would lower the hill coming up from it. Temporarily a sloping piece of plank could be put on the south end of the swing bridge, and later on, when a new swing bridge is built, it could be put up to the level of the iron bridge, and an approach put at the north end of the swing bridge.

If our city fathers cannot adjust matters to get all the benefit of the raise, perhaps they could get a part of it; everything done to lower the steep grade of the hill will be an imof joint, which terminated the game. ment-the more the better.-Yours, OBSERVER.

Constables and Their Duties.

(To The Editor of The Post.) Dear Sir,-In your issue of Thursday you draw attention to the fact that in l'eterboro the constables act as sanitary inspectors in the supervision of lanes and back yards. When I was in the council I frequently drew attention (or tried to) to the fact lief from the first box. Three boxes that by an amendment to Public Health cured me entirely." acts constables are by virtue of office sanitary inspectors : "All constables appointed for any provincial or judicial, temporary judicial or territorial distriet, under the act respecting constubles (chap. 82, R. S. O.) shall be exoffice senitary inspectors, with the some powers as sanitary inspectors appointed under this act, (Amendment P. H. Act Chap. 205, Sec. 7): I presented this to the attention of the connections with the intention ofhaving the constables do their duty and save the town the salary of a special officer, whose office, he this amendment, becomes absolute. I also advocated a rear rangement of official appointments, doing awar or lessoning the cost to the rateparers, materially. I think even now the question should be considered by our present council .- Yours truly, P. PALMER BURROWS. Lindsay, April 28th, 1899.

The Milk Question.

(To The Editor of The Post.) Sir,-I have lived in Lindsay and have a home and family, and my family and myself use what is sold as milk. I have serious doubts, some mornings, whether it is milk or not. Am generally inclined to think that it is not. Thinking that something was wrong with the quality of that which I procured from my milk vendor, I made a change and bought from another dealer, but the milk I am now receiving is worse than that obtained from the previous vender. Could you inform me to whose business it is to ascertain whether the milk is pure or not? I myself like a little more milk and less water .- Yours truly, CITIZEN. Note.-Sanitary Inspector Douglas is supposed to make periodical tests of the milk supplied by vendors, but we are not aware that he is obliged to do left on the island with a team of so at regular intervals. It is a long time since we heard of a milk test report being submitted. At any rate, his apparatus is crude, and now that we for the site of the camps, 25 miles up have a Creamery expert in the town, with the latest scientific appliances at command, we think our board of health should order their inspector to collect samples frequently and have them properly tested at the Creamery -That hight there came a very sharp then our citizens would have something reliable to go by. We are also of opinion that milk vendors should be compelled to take out licenses-then the man who watered his milk could be punished by the withdrawal of the permission to sell to our citizens. - Ed.

The Bread Question.

(To The Elitor of The Post.) Sir,-As a recent article in your paper has aroused considerable interest in the bread question, and as I hold that some of the statements therein were misleading and that bread at 12c per large loaf is not too dear, I ask you to insert the following extract from the Canadian Baker and Confectioner, to see the puff of smoke which would published in Toronto. In it a prominannounce the coming of relief. They ent Ontario baker, in whose shops labor-saving machinery is extensively employed, makes the following estimate

Where will the profit be if bread is sold at 10c a double loaf? When sold at 12c it does leave a little profit after paying commission to grocers and loss from stale bread.-Yours, etc., W. J. MORTON.

River Obstruction.

(To The Editor of The Post.) Sir,-Let me commend your editorial on the above the other day .- Our town has gone to a large expense in providing a wharf in the middle of the town, and then they allow the river to be so blockaded by scows and cribs of logs that the wharf is practically of no use. Let anyone look at it to-day-at least two-thirds of the stream is blocked with logs, and there is a sunken scow farther up the stream. Last year these obstructions were a perfect nuisance to the steamboat men, and now, with a swift scurrent in the river, I suppose the steamboat men are none too auxious to risk their boats by forcing a pass-

It is said some councillors are too much afraid of losing votes, and so do not take action. It is an infernal (if I may use the term) shame that this state of affairs should exist. If the town has control of the river inside of the town, let the council put their power into force; if it is the government, then let the council memorialize to have the nuisance abated. . There has been enough of this obstruction in the past-let there be no more of it. The notice to the offenders, who know the law perfectly should be a summons each and every time, and there would soon be a clear course for the steamers .-TRAVELLER. Yours, etc.

He represented the churches and temperance organizations, and Christian homes of the town, and these all stand against the extension of the traffic. Increased sale of liquor meant the crippling of the purchasing power of the people, and therefore is a menace to commercial interests. There was already too much drinking in Orillia." Rev. Dr. Gray, as one of the oldest residents and ratepayers in Orillia gave his testimony against the liquor traffic. "When you establish a place to sell liquor," said the venerable Doctor, "you begin to manufacture more drunkards." He hoped no additional licenses would be granted.

"To Err is Human."

People like to talk about attractive things in advertising. In a company recently the proverb above quoted, and which appeared at the head of one of a well constructed series of advertisements of Hood's Sarsaparilla, was so much discussed that we doubt if any one there will ever forget the source whence it came. Messrs. Hood & Co. are using these proverb advertisements on a very broad scale, and they are attracting discussion and favorable comment everywhere.
