In Memoriam of John Mangan, who died

And Christ, whom thou didst love.

Our house is strangely sad and lone,

But God, so wonderful and kind,

You gaze upon his vacant chair,

His form you think you see,

Yet joy that he is free.

We miss it eyerywhere;

You start to find he is not there,

We miss by form at home, abroad,

And O what sorrow fills our heart

No more his footsteps shall we hear,

No more his gentle voice will cheer-

No more on earth that face we'll see,

Oh, it seems so hard this pain to bear,

Mourners, dry your weeping eyes,

Yes, in that home beyond the skies

He'll greet you all on that bright shore,
