Don't neglect the children's eyes. It frequently happens that children at study suffer from headaches solely because of defects in the eyes. When physicians come across such cases they send the patients to us for spectacles, which give relief. We have made a careful study of cases of defective sight, and fit glasses upon scientific principles. There is no hap-hazard or guess work in our methods.

We make no charge at all for consultation - only for the glasses if you need them.

HEAD LAKE. Correspondence of THE POST.] WET WEATHER. - Many are the complaints two weeks. The lowlands are completely flooded and the crops are perishing where the water cannot escape. Some are mourning the loss of potatoes planted, as the seed are rotting in the ground. Many fields cannot be sown for the water thereon. The cry is "enough for a while." We want fine sunshine now to square up for the several inches of mud....Some parties have been trying to keep track of the rainfall. One man set out a coal oil barrel in his yard where the rainfall was recorded, and in eight days the barrel was overflowed. Pretty heavy rain, I reckon—likely some 40 rod tangle-foot in that rainfall.

RECOVERING.—The infant child of Thomas Southern is slowly recovering from a heavy attack of inflammation on the lungs. Dr. Broad, of Coboco has been in attendance and hopes to bring the litt sufferer to rights again. The Dr. has good success in such cases...The good people in this section rejoice to see Mr. David Thompson recovering from his recent heavy illness. For weeks he lay very low, but is now able to be up in his cosy chair several hours each day. All hope he will be able soon to swing the scythe in the growing grass. We do not like to lose an old and tried friend.

[Special Correspondence of THE POST]
OBITUARY.—It becomes our sad and very painful duty this week to chronicle the death of the late Mr. Daniel McLeish, who departed this life on Saturday morning, June 2nd, at the early age of 20 years. Mr. McLeish had been alling for a short time with inflammation of the lungs, and was, to all appearances, gradually improving, but he was very suddenly stricken down on Saturday morning. Being born and brought up in this vicinity, Daniel was well-known and loved by all. The funeral, which took place on Monday, June 4th, to the Sebright cemetery, was very largely attended, especially so by the young people, who followed the remains of thoir late young companion as far as any mortal country the grave. solemn and touching manner, delivered a very impressive sermon from St. Matthew V. and IV.: "Blessed are they that mourn," and which will not beloved and aged father to mourn his loss, who have the deep sympathy of the entire neighborhood in their sad bereavement. To the mourners in words of the poet we would say :-"There is no death, what seems so is transition This life of mortal breath is but a suberb of the life Whose portals we call death."
