A Non-Too Runaway

As Mr. Fitzpatrick, of Ops, was proceeding homeward Monday with a load of lumber, drawn by a team of spirited colts, he left them in front of the post office while he went in. On coming out he found his team had disappeared, and on looking up Kent-st. he saw them climbing the hill at a "Nancy Hanks" gait. When they reached the railroad track the neck-yoke left the pole, which dropped the lumber, breaking it, and also the whiteline, and setting the horses free from the wagon. With some difficulty the horses were captured, and Mr. Fitzpatrick is pardoningly proud of them.

Obnoxious Weeds

Weeds of luxuriant growth have sprung up along the streets of the town and left ways of the country, and if they are left to remain standing, they will scatter seed for a greater crop next year. According to the statute governing the destruction of weeds the scythe should be brought into use in the removal of every weed that is detrimental to agriculture, and now when the scythe is appearing in the time of the low Land owners who allow obnoxious weeds to flourish on their premises do an injury to their neighbors' lands; therefore, everyone should be careful to remove them. If a complaint be made, anyone may be fined for neglecting to cut them down.
