A Dog's Adventure with a Binder. A farmer who is vaubly eloquent on m :ny subjects beside the weather, Wednesday related to the agricultural editor the story of an adventure that befell his dog. The canine had a nose for game, and had accompanied his maste: to the field where he was engaged in cutting wheat. The dog was following behind the binder when by some unaccountable procedure a field mouse became loca'ed on the framework of the binder. When smpped at by the dog the mouse ran onto the rapidly travel-canling vas e'evator. The dog fo'lowed suit. There was more than the sound of the reaper heard throughout the land during the next few seconds. There were audible evidences of a coz in distress. Before the farmer could stop his team the dog had been carried up the elevator, transferred to the bindirgattschment and thrown out on the ground with a stout manilla cord bound tightly asound his body. Part of a sheaf cf grain was also enclosed in the strugglingbundle. "What about the mouse?" asked the news sifter. "Well, it didn't get away. It went down to the ground with the doz, and as soon as poor Collie cou'd s'op hovling there was a dead mouse. He couldn't cat it, though, until I had cat the bard. Thought he hadn't room for it I gues.'

A Remedy Denanded. The attention of the medical health authorities was last falldirected to a foul drain connecting with nost of the residences along the upper portion of Bond-st., and into which several are said to have connected water closets. The drain in question empties into ancpen drain which runs unprotected several hundred feet until it enters a small tream running to the river. Last year a feeble effert was made by the officers of the board to remedy the trouble, but the reall was far from being satisfactory, and this season the nuisance is worse, if possible, than ever before, and the stench astending from the open drain is at times almost unbearable -so much so that people residing in that neighborhood are compelled to close their windows in order to rimain in their houses. The result is seet in several cases of sickness almost directly traceable to tols drain. Oaly a few tays since a child playing at the church corner spoke to her parents regarding the bad smell existing Surely there is compensation or an antiin that locality, and the ext day she comin that locality, and the ext day she comin that locality, and the ext day she complained of feeling ill, and on examining
