LINDSAY, FRIDAY, JULY 16, 1897.

Are You Cooked? Taking it all together. How have you stood the weather? Has it not been a trifle warm, Have you not longed for cooling storm.

Or sighed for modicum of shade By babbling brook, in leafy glade? Perchance you wished for something nice-

Cool drinks, snow banks, or cream on ice. A week of sizzling, torrid heat -Record of twenty years been best :

Old Sol blazed down from dawn to dark.

Monday was the real scorcher sure, Although few Sunday could endure; Warm winds blew up from sunny south In blasts as if from furnace mouth.

Mercury closed on century mark ,

Whew! it was warm-say, it was hot Enough to boil a cook stove pot. Or roast a goose in open air -Pray, let us know, howdid you fare?

Everything wilted in the sun, And al were glad when day was done Cars ran on lines of burning steel. Birds ceased to sing and pigs to squeal, t was a task to keep one's breath, Everybody was in melting mood-Some passed remarks that were not good.

There may be land hotter than this, Where sinners' souls sizzle and siss, But everyone about this time To cooler spot prefers to climb.

But I am puzzled : reason why-Men wet with sweat still say they're dry. Warmer weather never booked-About this date you should be cooked. Lindsay, July 16th, 1897.

BLOWS AND SHOCKS.

When one person strikes another with his fist or with any instrument or weapon, the person struck is said to receive a "blow." Also when a person becomes the subject of a sudden calamity - as for example, the loss of a large sum of money, or the treachery of a trusted friend, that person is said to receive a "blow." My point is, that we use the same word to express the effect of the impact of physical force against the body and of a fact against the mind. There is something strong in this. Let us talk about it for three minutes, prefacing the debate by a woman's depressed. Indeed my nerves were completely shattered. My appetite failed, and what food I took gave me great pain at the chest and side and between the shoulit had cured. I cannot say I thought t would do any good in a case as bad as mine; but, as I knew nothing else to do I got a bottle from Mr. Brooks, chemist, Gray-hott Road, and began to take it. The first bottle produced a little improvement; my nerves were not so bad, and I could est without feeling the pain and distress from which I had suffered so long. To be brief, I was so hearteved and cheered by this that I kept on taking the Syrup, growing stronger and better in mind and body. Soon my health was restored, and I have had no return of the disease. (Signed)

body depends on the "condition," the power of resistance in the person who receives it. The loss of a loved relation always produces what the medical men call a "shock," yet the results are by no means the same in all cases. At the time of her great loss this lady undoubtedly was, without fully realizing it. the subject of digestive weakness—incipient dyspep-sia. The unhappy experience which she was called upon to meet at once prostrated the already feeble nerves that control the digestive process, and the malady assumed | full sway over her. Then followed action | and re-action (nature's law), until Mother Seigel's Syrap did some radical work; toning the stomach, expelling the impurities from the blood, feeding the nerves, and setting every crgan on the road to healthy operation. Life is full of the possibilities of blows and shocks. We them, but we may be pre-
