Mr. Callaghan would never have escaped with his life—as there was no one with in call—only that he was able to catch the ring in the nose of the furious brute and thus hold him in check until help arrived, when he was removed to his house terribly mangled, but still with some hopes for his recovery.

On Monday evening last the members of the assembled in their rooms in THE POST block for the purpose of expressing in a tangible manner their esteem for Mr. Michael O'Brien, and of giving voice to the general regret felt at his impending departure for Peterboro to take a position on the staff of the collegiate institute of that town. Mr. George McHugh occupied the chair and a number of ladies graced the meeting by their presence. After some remarks by the chairman Dr. Lynch stepped forward and read the follow-ing address, Mr. P. J. Hurley at the proper moment presenting Mr. O'Brien with a gold watch, suitably engraved:-To Michael O'Brien, Esq., DEAR SIR. -A few of your friends in Lindsay have met here this evening to convey to you in some manner, however inadequate it may be, an expression of the regret which they all feel on your departure. As a citizens of blameless life and a trusty and devoted friend, you have made friends in every class in the community. In the St. Vincent de Paul Society you have been found quick to respond to the cry of disfull of that charity which consoles the spirit as well as relieves the wants of the poor, and which looks not for reward nor is exalted by its own goodness. In the supervision of the Separate school we have learned most to admire your character. The routine duties of your position as teacher imposed on you the moral obligation to faithfully lead the youth committed to your care into a wise knowledge of the various branches of learning but you have not stopped at the letter of your obligation. It has been your pleasure to form the minds of jour scholars on a more ex-tended plan than the school law required, a plan which had for its scope the highest phase of Christian character, with all its usefulness and possibilities. The idea of the Catholic youth, with moral principles well developed, obedient to the church, respectful to parents, observant of the laws, mindful of the rights of others, filled with a high sense of individual duty, power and responsibility-this is the model on which you have tried to form those committed to your charge, and we are willing to believe that you have not been unsuccessful. The Catholics of

One of the most active and useful of their fellow-members, you filled with acceptance for three years the ardnous duties of recording secretary, and whatever success Branch ? has attained may be largely attributed to your invaluable services, while under your wise direction as president the branch has been pursuing a career of presperity.

Filled with these regards for you, your friends have more than a passing feeling of personal loss; but this regret is accompanied with the pleasant consideration that in leaving Lindsay pleasant consideration that in leaving Lindsay
