

SON IS HERE
Oil or Gas St... gins. Those who have fert-giving article, if
L THE BEST.
ERATOR
the butter hard and s effects a saving and ELL THE BEST.

Lind...
GARMAKERS TO THE QUEEN

S: are thanks to the try for their kind to attend my Mil-grateful for the days.
ill, I trust, do so before sure to please. A nice ode, Ribbons, Laces,
S O'BRIEN
A few dozen bars of
to Britain.
Canadian Post.
N JULY, AUGUST 18 1893
BRUNSWICK DAIRYING.

ES, 50 Patterns
First-class Stock
TS, all guaranteed
Little Brit...

ND PAINT
DUNDRY
KINS
of Carting and Forwarding being up Steam Engines and abundance to land. Until a few years ago was carried on a very small the butter and cheese that was no longer a pest of a very inferile, and for many years this dairyman had not manufactured enough for his own consumption from the sister production. He is always a market to for an dairy produce, and this of preference, when it receives a large amount of profit on a pound of butter which depends as much on reducing the cost of production as in obtaining an enhanced price.

Proverbal Dairy Philosophy.
Milk adulteration may be brought about in many indirect ways.

The dairyman who keeps his milk pure can be trusted as an honest man.

As hay is made when the sun shines, so is money increased that dairyman who managed so that his cows yield milk abundantly when the dairy prices are high.

Some people seem to forget that the amount of profit on a pound of butter often depends as much on reducing the cost of production as in obtaining an enhanced price.

The dairyman who dumps a mass of decayed garbage before his cows for economy's sake, is injuring his customers more than if he diluted his milk half with water.

His milk and butter bring just as much in the market as if the food that produced them was grown on western prairies, and the difference of cost adds materially to his dairy profits.

He commits an equally injurious act against his fellowmen when he leaves the carcass of a dead animal unburied in the poor pasture, or daily milks with mammoth-begrimed hands.

The milk manufacturer who habitually has rich buttermilk, and whey on which a thick blanket of cream will arise, is a costly individual to employ, even when working for his board.

It always pays a dairyman better to stand by a manufacturer who is doing honest work for him, than to take up with a new man who builds a factory for the purpose of "running out" the old proprietor.

The provident dairyman mentally weights the food requirement of his herd of cows for a year in advance. In most cases he can buy them, and he can buy and sows accordingly.

The dairyman's responsibility for the care of his cows is not all gone when he is able to turn them out to grass in the early summer. The man feels his responsibility in this direction, and acts upon it, the more valuable will his dairy become to him.—Scientific American.

Creamy Summer Dairying.
Indoors, particular attention is necessary in midsummer to keep everything sweet about the creamery. See that the water is changed often in the water tank of the creamery, and the same well cleaned and scalded. Watch closely that the cloth used about the milk can does not become rancid. It should be frequently changed for a fresh one, and each wash day all soiled ones should be put through the wash. For milk strainers, nothing is so good as bleached butter cloth. If folded twice, a four-fold strainer will be made, which will be just right over the wire strainer, and be held in place with a tin hand strainer.

In setting a granite stone.
It is no use to have rickety frames or to leave them out of doors uncovered with water in the trough. That part of the stone standing in the water becomes soft and is easily worn away, while that exposed to the snow is continually hardened and wears out of a round circle so that no tool can be properly ground upon it. The cut shows a well-seasoned piece of timber 1 foot square and 3 feet or more long, with a trough cut in the top, 8 or 10 inches deep, and thoroughly coated with hot oil or coal oil several times before using. Make the legs of 3x4 inch scantling bevelled at the top and firmly nailed on. The shaft can be supported by wooden boxes at the bottom, and a good leather strap tied to friction wheels that often come off the stone. Make a good solid cover and keep it on the stone when not in use. A plug at the filling hole will be obtained, and the stock will return you the cost.

A man with an income of $3000 a year can more conveniently pay a tax of $100 a year than if his income was $1000 and his tax $5, other things being equal. I found fertile fields in this state 40 miles from the market for sale at $50 an acre.
The Quakers and Dunhams in Pennsylvania
the same distance from market and much farther removed from the market than Jersey with its railroads, was never the customer than the merchant.

The progress and cattle that made a revenue for our fathers is now raising the standard of the western farmer. Good highways like most good things cost money. It is also true that the best things are worth all they cost.

A man with an income of $3000 a year
can more conveniently pay a tax of $100
a year than if his income was $1000 and
his tax $5, other things being equal. I found fertile fields in this state 40 miles from the market for sale at $50 an acre.
The Quakers and Dunhams in Pennsylvania
the same distance from market and
much farther removed from the market
than Jersey with its railroads, was never

the customer than the merchant.

Emily was burnt by ent farm. On the 21st
e amount of my claim highly pleased with the insurance company
own interests by.

ES MITCHELL

ALL AROUND THE FARM.

Bonds Are a Necessity and a Paying Investment.

Especially if a generation ago she shekels will be his who eaters that cannot be hit with a stone.

The Old Reliable is devoting a couple years to raising a steer for sale and marketing him to market, and down the road to market, the merchant has sold 200 worth of colby and $5000 worth of cheese hauled from Jersey over several times dropped a commission and two or three weeks en route. That is the true test. Jersey with its railroads is never the customer than the merchant.

Emily was burnt by
ent farm. On the 21st
e amount of my claim
highly pleased with the
insurance company
own interests by.

of the haul being over a good, macadamized road, the last mile over a good dirt road, as good as the country in the town, that team drew two tons with apparently little effort over the seven miles of macadamized, then removing most of the load, the teams were more weary and strained with the last mile and half-load than with the seven miles and full load. Doubtless the comparison was made at a time unfavorable for the dirt roads. Men and teams cost money and every idle day or work performed at a disadvantage is a draft on our exchequer.

Competent authority has estimated the increased expense to the farmers of Iowa incident to bad roads at 20 per cent.
In like proportions our state is to suffer directly or indirectly from the same cause. In these days when Niagara is being harnessed to drive the wheels of machinery from Buffalo to Chicago, soil dirt and mud baffle Yankee ingenuity?—W. H. Burr, in Farm and Home.

The Silo a Modern Farm Necessity.
The silo is not unlike a tomb or can prison jar; it is simply an air-tight, water-tight compartment in which green, succulent-herbage may be placed and preserved. Nearly all sorts of farm crops may be preserved by the exclusion of air and moisture, but for profitable stock feeding, the best crop is fodder corn. From 10 to 20 tons can be stored to the acre, this being equivalent to 3 to 6 tons of hay. It feeds 40 to 50 lbs. per day should be allowed each mature animal. When building a silo aim to save the greatest convenience in filling and feeding. To estimate the capacity of the silo, allow one cubic foot for each animal and multiply by the number of days to feed. By means of the silo stock of the farm may easily be increased one-half and in some cases doubled.

Briefly, the silo means more stock, which means more manure, thus making more and better crops. The greater the crop, the greater the manure, the greater the fertility. There is too much cropping; too little manure. What is needed is a more intensive system of farming and the more we return the more will be our returns and satisfaction in feeling the soil is being pushed to its utmost capacity.—Farm and Home.

A Remedy for Cucumber Bugs.

One night a few weeks ago, upon going into the garden we found numerous black beetles on the small cucumbers plants, which were being eaten by them.
The thought that the smell of turpentine might drive them away matured into action and we immediately placed a small piece of cloth saturated in spirits of turpentine on each hill. In the morning not a beetle was to be seen. The plants kept on growing and were looking fine, when a few days ago we found the striped bug just swarming on them. We again applied the same remedy and the next morning not a striped pest was to be seen.—Martha of Maine.

Good Cooks and Happiness.
The cook of the future will come in the morning and leave again in the evening when her work is done, to secure greater independence than she can have when living under her employer's roof; or even if central kitchens for the cooking of dinners were to be established generally (such institutions could only supply the needs of a certain number of people in towns), cooks will always be wanted; there will always be abundant employment for capable persons.

Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in this respect, did not reflect the temper of the French people to do England an ill turn, has been unmistakably revealed, and a reciprocal feeling of distrust and animosity has been kindled in the English mind. On the other hand, the promptness with which Germany came forward to combine with England in curbing French insult and aggression, has done more than any other event which has occurred in 50 years to revive the friendships of those epochs when the victories of Frederick the Great foreclosed the British conquest of Canada, and when Englishmen and Prussians fought side by side at Waterloo.

Public sentiment is a tremendous force in a country like England, where the people practically rule. The day may come when France will find the revolution in English feeling with regard to Germany is an outcome of the Siamese affair, which, in its possibilities of harm, far outweighs any gain of territory on the left bank of the Mekong river.—New York Sun.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does one hear a woman say something like the following, after recounting faults of a most serious character on the part of her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part with her, for she is a fair cook but I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A great cause of friction between husband and wife would also be removed.
If a woman is at the mercy of the cook, and she is not a good, as a writer I have already quoted has remarked, "her table will soon become intolerable." Bad soup, soft and flabby fish, meat burnt outside and raw within. The husband will soon find food he can digest, but the wife will find him difficult to bear.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

A good cook is a treasure, a mistress
which wishes to offend. How often does
one hear a woman say something like
the following, after recounting faults of
a most serious character on the part of
her cook: "Still, I cannot afford to part
with her, for she is a fair cook but
I can get elsewhere. She satisfies my
husband better than any we have had."
and you know how difficult it is to
please. There is no peace if his dinner
does not please him.

</