-The heroic rescue of a tourist by priest in the Sonnblick mountain has been reported from Salaburg. The Sonnblick, famous as the seat of the loftlest meteorclogical survey in Europe, stands 11,000 feet above the level of the sea. Glacial formations abound near the summit. On Tuesday a sourist missed his footing near a hospice on the north side of the mountain. slipped down the steep side, and vanished in the ice and snow of a broad crevasse. The man was generally supposed to have been killed instantly, but Father Lechner, of hospice, regarded it as his duty to make a perilous trip into the crevasse. His St. Bernard dog crept ahead. He followed, supported as far as possible by a rope held by his colleagues in the hospice. Near the bottom of the crevice he cut the rope, and disappeared. He was given up for lost. Yesterday, however, he appeared at the hospice, half leading, half carrying, with his bleeding hands and bruised arms, the lost tourist. Father Lechner had found the man severely, although not mortally, injured at the bottom of the crevasse, and by Sonnblick. -During the last week the Minneapolis,

Not only in a physical way, but also in in an intellectual way, the Yale smokers are inferior to the anti-smokers. The smoking habit is disadvantageous to scholarship. Of those students who, within a given time, have received junior appointments above dissertations, only five per cent. were amokers and very few smokers received appointments of any kind. It would seem, therefore, that brain power and the scholarships of the smokers at Yale are far inferior to those of the

Then he lit the fuse and crept off to the Madawaska to the Lake of Two Rivers. Then Mr. Thompson and I, with the men, went down another branch of the river to Great Opeonge lake, where the men are now at work on another central residence, built of course of logs; from there we went to White Rock lake on the Pettawawa, by that to Cedar lake, and from that by White Rock lake to Island lake, at the head of the Muskoks, and thence to our starting point. I was in the park for two weeks, during which I was yery busy selecting sites for the half-way huts for the rangers. Mr. Thompson is now in charge up there with his men. Another central house will be built on Burnt lake on the Pettawaws. This year much cannot be done in the way of game protection, but next year they will be in position to do as much as their
