

Ayer's Remedies.

A Gentleman

Who formerly resided in Connecticut, but who now resides in Honolulu, writes: "For 20 years past, my wife and I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and we attribute to it the curls which she and I now have, while hundreds of our acquaintances, ten or a dozen years younger than we, are either bald-headed, white, or bald. When asked how our hair has retained its color and fullness, we reply, "By the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor—nothing else."

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

The French Costume.

Hear the words—ay, ay, ay, As they sound in—ay, ay, ay, And the words—ay, ay, ay, As they sound in—ay, ay, ay, Little baby can't say—ay, ay, ay, And it sounds the sweet—ay, ay, ay, But the lullaby and sleep—ay, ay, ay, And we hear the word—ay, ay, ay, I and you and we—ay, ay, ay, They are all the words—ay, ay, ay, When I ask for apple—ay, ay, ay, Then I use the word—ay, ay, ay, My dog Rover says—ay, ay, ay, And he makes the word—ay, ay, ay, As she cries—ay, ay, ay, When mamma says, "Darling boy," When I ask for "just a—ay, ay, ay, You can hear the word—ay, ay, ay, One more word, that is—ay, ay, ay, Hear it in my play—ay, ay, ay, These are all the words long, And so ends my word song.—Kindergarten News.

THE SEASON'S BATHING SUITS.

Pictoresque French Designs—Mohair and Serge Are Popular Materials. Early in the season it looked as though it might take an entire steamer trunk for the transportation of the bathing suit, as there was a promise of long skirts and still longer trousers, but the New York Sun, which illustrates some pretty costumes, tells that, with the rise in temperature there has been a decided rise in skirts until they now reach the line popular for a few summers, too, than ever.

FRENCH COSTUMES.

does not become so heavy as flannel. Serge, however, is in great favor and comes in a variety of colors. The "blousnet," with no skirt, but wide trousers gathered into a band at the knee, represents the latest French novelty. The accordion plaited skirt appears among the recent designs and is especially effective in silk, which is much used for bathing costumes. The blouse waist is extremely popular. A striking costume, copied from a French model, is of white serge (trimmed with red waist), the waist blouses slightly by after the fashion of the latest imported gowns. A wide sailor collar flatters the rather low neck. A plain trimmings across the chest and collar to protect the neck. There is a double skirt, finished with two rows of braid, and large puff sleeves, coming to the elbow. A pretty dark suit of blue serge has a vest and revers on the blue serge and skirt of white cashmere, trimmed with rows of blue braid. A sash of white is knotted about the waist. Striped flannels are employed in various combinations. A white one striped with black has a broad collar and belt of white, with a deep rill to the waist coming below the belt. A touch of color is added to the front of the waist. Among gorgeous costumes is one with the skirt and trousers of red serge and with red. It has a wide jacket shoulder cape of white and white belt. Long stockings are worn, with or without sandals, to harmonize with the general effect of the suit.

Outing Hats.

Outing hats of white felt for the steamer and general wear in the country are in the honor of the popular with men. The soft crown is imitated from front to back, and the wide rim projects for shade in front and is rolled up in the back. Harper's Bazar says it may be simply banded with white ribbon, or it may have a rich twist of white crepe around the crown, and a blackbird poised on the left side, or else it is ornamented there with a cluster of black poppies or of stiff quills. Gray hats simply banded are in the same shape to match the gray traveling gown and perhaps to harmonize with those of the men of the party.

Jewelry Notes.

The prejudice against opals seems to have died out. Anyway they are the fashion again. Imitation peacock feathers also are worn in bonnets. Until lately most women had a terror of having them in their hair, much more of wearing them. "People have become too sensible to imagine that the ordinances of Providence can be set aside by the wearing of a stone," says a jeweler. Little jewelry is worn with outdoor dress, but print shirts afford the woman whose passion lies in the direction of bangles an excuse for showing a pretty taste in scarfs. The long scarfs require fastening down, and two or three jeweled pins are not considered too many for the purpose. For morning wear golden ornamental jewelry seems appropriate, being simple and unobtrusive in effect. Cut silver buckles are now the thing to wear on the waist belt. A pretty design for these is a square buckle, with the big chrysanthemum twin arranged around it. The slide is composed of buds of the same flower. The pattern is shown to advantage on white moire ribbon. Another design is the very popular Prince of Wales feathers, which is a becoming shape to a slender figure.

Raspberry Shortcake.

Four cups flour; 2 tablespoons butter; 3 cups milk; an egg; half teaspoonful salt; 2 teaspoonfuls baking powder; half cup sugar; a quart berries. Mix the salt and baking powder with the flour, rub in the butter and add the milk and beaten egg. Roll this dough into a sheet half an inch thick and spread with it the bottom of a greased baking tin. Cover it with the berries, sugar them liberally and lay over the top another sheet of dough a little thinner than the lower crust. Bake in a steady oven, cut in squares and eat hot, with butter and sugar.

National Council of Women.

The time is now fixed for the convention of the national council of women of the United States. It is for February, 1895, and is to be held in Washington. There are now 17 national associations belonging to the council, which represents a constituency of about 700,000 women. The executive committee of the council has passed resolutions on the subject of dress reform, favoring patriotes, divorce reform and an equal standard of morality for men and women. The resolution on divorce reform reads:

Resolved, That as divorce is a measure equalizing both sexes, we hold it just that commissions created to deal with divorce should be representative of both. To this end should be organized an organization of national organizations, an organization of national organizations, request of the appointing power in each state, whether gubernatorial or legislative, that all such commissions hereafter to be appointed shall be composed of both men and women in equal numbers. That we ask the National Divorce Reform League to take as steps toward altering divorce laws without conferring with the national council of women of the United States through a committee on divorce reform. That we instruct our committee on divorce reform to ask for a hearing before the National Reform League at its next meeting in order to provide for co-operation between men and women in regard to this measure, which equally affects both.

Women's Affairs in England.

Although Miss Johnson has beaten all her male competitors in this year's mathematical tripos at Cambridge, the general work of improving the higher education of women appears to be in a bad way, owing mainly, it is stated, to the indifference of those directly concerned. The Association of Women Lecturers particularly is on the verge of bankruptcy and will cease to exist unless its patrons subscribe a certain sum of money. The association has been patronized by aristocratic faddists to any extent, but the interest in its doings rapidly vanishes when a call for cash is made. On the other hand, women politicians have plenty of funds and are many more active than men. Many meetings have been held in London and the series having taken place at St. James' hall under the presidency of the Countess of Carlisle, who is probably the ablest woman in public life in this country. This activity is due to the belief in an early general election, bringing there is no immediate need to incur the expense of introducing a female suffrage bill at this session having been abandoned.—London Queen.

A Successful Business Woman.

Mrs. Zulme E. Hearsey of Baton Rouge is one of the most successful business women in her state. Belonging both by birth and marriage to distinguished and wealthy families, she enjoyed the numerous educational and social advantages that young women of her station elsewhere young women in her state. After the close of the war her husband being an invalid, Mrs. Hearsey opened a large bookstore, which at once sprung into popular favor and today is the recognized headquarters for all standard publications as well as the rendezvous of all book lovers and literateurs. She possesses the confidence of the entire community and has contrived the sale of the New Orleans papers in Baton Rouge for years. She employs a force of 30 employees, and her second son, Gaston Hearsey, has been her assistant for several years. She also manages a large floriculture trade, and the roses and camellias raised in her garden are known all over the south. Her florist's business is scarcely less profitable than her news and bookstore.—Baton Rouge (La.) Letter.

Cigarettes in High Society.

At the woman writers' dinner in London America was well represented. Mrs. Poulteney Bigelow is described as being "magnificent in past gown, set off by some emerald velvet arrangement on her shoulders." Everybody who has read "A Yellow Aster" will be interested to know that at this dinner the author, who has been christened with the title of her book as a nickname, was quite beautifully dressed. "You only saw films of white lace as she sat half hidden behind the flowers. It was as when the autumn mists fall on the asters, and the oriental pearls round her neck made one think of the gossamer strings of dew pearls that cling so often around the flower of that lady's choice. But when you saw the Yellow Aster take the lead in lighting a cigarette then comparisons failed you."—London Correspondent.

The American Spiders.

"The astronomers of the naval observatory at Washington have sought all over the world for spiders' webs, utilized in telescopes for cross lines. Threads of cobwebs are employed for their exceeding fineness and are not affected by moisture or temperature. According to The Optician, specimens were obtained from China by the directors of the observatory, because it was imagined that the large spider of that country would perhaps produce a particularly excellent quality of web. However, it was found that the spider of that country is not the neighborhood of Washington as found in the neighborhood of Washington. This is another case in which manufacturing in this country excels that of all others. Even the spiders of this great and glorious land are a credit to it, says Railway Engineering.

Nothing Strange.

Intelligent people who realize the importance of the blood in keeping the body in the normal condition, find nothing strange in the number of diseases that flow from a weak blood to cure. So many troubles result from a weak blood, that it is not surprising that the blood is the most vitalized.

Dr. Flora A. Brewster.

Dr. Flora A. Brewster of Baltimore has won an honorable and successful place in the profession by persistent hard work. For nearly 10 years she taught school in Pennsylvania, contributing to the support of her relatives and pursuing studies which enabled her to graduate from the state normal school at Mansfield. In 1878 she went to Chicago and took the editorial management of The Newsboys' Appeal, an agent of The Newsboys' Appeal, in the illustrated journal, published in the interests of the Newsboys' home. The next year she began to study medicine with Dr. Julia Holmes Smith of Chicago, at the same time conducting a night school for the Newsboys' home. In 1882 she completed the course in the Chicago Homeopathic Medical college, went to Baltimore and opened an office. She acquired a large practice during the next four years and then entered into partnership with her sister, Dr. Cora Belle Brewster. In 1889 they began the publication of The Baltimore Family Health Journal, which two years later was changed to The Homeopathic and Health Journal and was made a hospital journal. In 1890 Dr. Brewster was elected surgeon and gave clinics in the new homeopathic hospital in Baltimore. Last year she dissolved partnership with her sister and opened a sanitarium for the medical and surgical treatment of women, which is proving a marked success.—Baltimore Letter.

The Lady of Governor's Island.

Mrs. Miles, wife of Major General Nelson Miles, who will succeed General O. O. Howard in command of the department of the east, with headquarters on Governor's Island, is a handsome and very charming woman, and as the leader of army society in this vicinity she will give a life to it that it has not had for some time. She is related to Mrs. Cameron, wife of the senator from Pennsylvania, and has a lovely daughter. The two will in doubt make Governor's Island a rendezvous for many well known society people. Mrs. Miles has seen life on the frontier, and some of the most interesting women are those who have had such experiences.—New York Journal.

Items of Local Interest.

Potash and bone! Potash and bone! will give to your meadows an excellent tone. Clover and timothy are both drains. One conducts fertility into the farm, and the other takes it out. Buckwheat and crimson clover will make a good combination to use after strawberries.

Rural New Yorker advises to experiment with crimson clover.

"Don't put your whole farm into it, but try as much seed as you can afford to risk and no more. Prove that it will live through an average winter at your place, and we will tell you that then you can't possibly get too much of it on your farm."

There are few who realize the possibilities of even the present proportions of the business in pondable fish—that is, the fish used entirely for oil and fertilizer.

The low price of wheat has led to the increased planting of beans in western New York.

Some eastern farmers, like T. B. Terry, have been recommending the sowing of wheat after millet, claiming to get better yields of grain wheat this season.
