The new bandstand is now approachlog completion. Contractor Pilkie has pushed the work with commendable alacrity under the supervision of Alderman Ribson, and already it is evident that the building will not only be ornamental, but one of the most con fortable and convenient for the purpose that could possibly be erected; experts stand and wonder how Chairman R bson can erect such a building and not exceed the estimater. Should he, however, go a little over the amount in his efforts to do a good thing for the town, and the council fail to grant the additional sum, the public would, we fancy, back up the chairman. In any case we would suggest a concert program on opening night, and a silver collection to be taken up to defray any extra expanse we are sure the general public would respond heartily and show their appreciation of the erection of a building chiefly for their own pleasure.
