> THE INDIAN MISSIONS, which number eight, was very interesting. He found the work flourishing, though the labors of the priests were of the most arduous nature. The Indians are Ojib ways and are nearly all Roman Catholics. That is the case nearly all along Lake Superior and in Algoms, but in Southern Oacario, as his lordship remarked, the Indians are mostly Protestant. The live lihood of the Indian is obtained principally by fishing in the summer and hunting in the winter. The reserves are many, but the population in each is small. The Roman Catholic Indian population is over no easy task. They travel by cance in summer and in different ways in winter.
