-The chief lesson learned from the man couvres of Austrian troops is that immense armies, when sent into the field, must be divided and sub-divided in order to come into action at all. The scene of action was in a flat country, intersected by few hills and with no important rivers or other impediments worthy of mention, Yet, notwithstanding the absence of obstacles. it was found impossible to bring into formation more than one corps at a time on each side. Two corps formed lines too long to be properly seen from the centre or to be handled efficiently. The use of smokeless powder caused many surprises and rendered extreme caution necessary. All who witnessed the manoeuvres agre as to the unnatural effect produced by the almost noiseless, fitful advance of small bodies of troops, particularly when no command is heard save the sound of the signal whistles. Another alarming effect was produced by the artillery, which suddenly appeared where least expected, and was hardly seen until its fire was felt. Foreigh military critics present expressed the greatest admiration for the high efficiency shown by the troops. -Eleven persons lost their lives in the collision between a freight train and the Toronto and Montreal express on the Wabash railroad at Kingsbury, Ind., at 5.30 screw steamship, which left Port au | mutilated. When the the man alighted the bull jumped on him and gored him to death, while the crowd cheered. Several of them were gored and others injured in attempting to make their escape from the infuriated brute, which was finally shot by COMMUNICATIONS.

Queen Victoria's Highland Church, [To the Editor of THE POST.]

Sir.-In carelessly looking over a copy of last week's Warder I noticed that Queen Victoria had laid the foundation stone of a Presbyterian church. The particulars being so yery short, and being aware so few Presbyterians ever see or read the Warder, perhaps a few facts that show the queen's great regard and love for, also the interest she has taken in the church in the past, might not be out of place, and might interest Presbyterians in Canada. The church referred to is the parish church of Crathie, in which parish Balmoral Castle, her majesty's Righland home, is situated. The queen has been s regular attendant and communicant o Crathle church for a great many years, while residing in Scotland. Some years ago the parishioners desired to build a more comfortable and suitable place of worship, and the queen was so much attached to the old building that it has taken some years to obtain her consent to to its removal. Besides laying the foundation stone of the new church, her majesty's subscription to the building fund is $2,000. To show how much further the queen takes an interest in church work, may add there is also a beautiful chapel for Presbyterian worship in the castle. The queen's annual offering for promoting church work in the highlands and islands is the handsome donation of $10,000 to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. There is also in Scotland the Chapel Royal, consisting of three deans and six chaplains; the ministers are Presbyterian clergymen. The queen has often called on the services of Presbyterian ministers to preach before her at the parish church of Crathie, or at the chapel of Balmoral Canada has been honored in this respect; the Rev. James Barclay, D. D., of St. Paul's church, Montreal, has been called apon and did preach before her in Crathie church, and is likely up to the present, the only minister that has been so honored in the Dominion. Queen Victoria no doubt felt it a great honor to have the privilege of laying the foundation stone of a Presby terian church, and the church and people also received more honor by her. condes cension in doing so.
