LINDSAY, FRIDAY, OCT. 2 1896 The Noted Preacher Declines to "Turn His Pulpit Into a Stump." Washington, D.C., Sept. 28.-The Rev.

T. DeWitt Talmage, in his sermon at the First Presbyterian Church yesterday, made the following allusion to the presidential campaign: "During the last six presidentia elections I have been urged to ent the political arena, but I never have and never will turn the pulpit in which I preach into a political stump. Every minister must do as he feels called on to do, and I will not criticise him for doing what he considers his duty; but all the political harangues from pulpits fron now until the 3rd of November will not in all the United States change one vote, but will leave many ears stopped against anything that such clergymen may utter the rest of their lives." The statement was followed by a reference to the depression now prevailing throughout the country and he said that, never within his memory, had "so many people literally starved to death as in the last few months." He believed the country was better off after every crisis and that the Almighty would settle the controversy between the metals.

Wheelman Has an Exciting Experience With the Reptiles, Which Crawl All Over Him Before He is Rescued.

Lumbertville, N.J., Sept. 28.-Bowman's Hill, on the brow of which there is reputed to be buried a fabulous amount of English gold, was the scene of an exciting encounter yesterday between a party of wheelmen and a nest of snakes. Since the publication of the statement that Aaron McCarthy had recently received a chart showing the exact location of the hidden treasure parties from this city have visited the hill and roamed through the graveyard where the English soldiers and their money are said to reyoung men and women from the city started on their wheels to visit the spot. riving at the bottom of the hill they left their wheels by the roadside and started afoot up the rough path leading to the top of the hill. The side of the hill is strewn with boulders, and some of the more ven-turesome forsook the path and made the ascent by jumping from rock to rock. When near the top one of the party slipped and fell between the rocks. Quickly regaining his feet, he endeavored to climb up the rock. Not being able to do so, he overturned a smaller stone to aid him, when to his horror a dozen or so snakes The wheelman made frantic efforts to

Mr. Gladstone Speaks at Liverpool in Her Behalf.

The Grand Old Man Pleads, for the Strong Support of Public Opinion to Strengthen the Hands of the Government Against the Turk -Press Comments.

Liverpool, Sept. 24.-Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone arrived here at noon today to attend the mass-meeting in regard to Armenia, and were met at the station by a large crowd of people, who cheered the ex-Premier as he made his appearance.

The much-heralded mass-meeting was held in Hengler's Circus, which was packed, and thousands were turn-In opening his address, Mr. Gladstone moved this resolution:

"This meeting trusts that Her Majesty's Ministers, realizing to the fullest extent the terrible condition in which their fellow-Christians are placed, will do everything possible to obtain for them full security and protection, and this meeting assures Her Majesty's Ministers that they may rely upon the cordial support of the citizens of Liverpool in whichever step they feel necessary to take for that

When the applause had been calmed down, Mr. Gladstone declared his adhesion to the principles contained in the resolution, and said he came there not claiming any authority except that of a citizen of Liverpool. But, he added, the national platform upon which authority for sentiments universally breadth of the land, and urged that in this matter party sympathies should

Continuing, Mr. Gladstone said: "I entertain the lively hope and strong belief that the present deplorable situation is not due to the act or default of the Government of this great country." (Cries of "Oh!" and cheers.) "The present movement," he added, "is based on the broad grounds of humanity, and is not directed against the Mohammedans, but against the Turkish officials, evidence of whose barbarities rests upon credible official "Now, as in 1876, to the guilt of

Mr. Gladstone then expressed the opinion that the purpose of the gathering was defensive and prospective, sayhope that the massacres were ended, Constantinople. (Loud cheers.) Mr. Gladstone then said: "I doubt if it is an exaggeration to say that it was in the Sultan's palace, and there only, that the inspiration has been supplied, and the policy devised of the whole series of massacres. When the Sultan carries massacre into his own capital, under the eyes of the ambassadors, he appears to have gained the very acme of what it is possible for him to do. "But," the speaker further said, "the weakness of diplomacy, I trust, is about to be strengthened by the echo of this nation's voice." (Great cheer-

Mr. Gladstone then referred to the supineness of the ambassadors of the powers at Constantinople, and said: "The concert of Europe is an august and useful instrument; but, it has not usually succeeded in dealing with the Eastern question, which has arrived at a period when it is necessary to strengthen the hands of the Government by an expression of national oplrion. I believe that the continued stantinople has operated as a distinct

Mr. Gladstone said: "The resolution which I have proposed observes the rules of prudence and does not require even for the sake of a great end that we place ourselves in a state of war with united Europe. Continuing, he ridiculed the idea that a state of war would be the result or consequence of England's acting alone in giving an ultimatum to the Porte. He would not be one to plunge England into war, but England would not make of herself a slave to be dragged by the chariot wheels of the other powers of Europe. (Cheers.)

"England," he said, "had a just right to coerce Turkey and the first step must be the recall of our Ambassador from Constantinople, and the consequent dismissal of the Turkish Ambassador in London. (Loud and prolonged cheers.)

moute to the relative moderation of Mr. Gladstone's language and ther continues: "It is when Mr. Gladstone proposes practical remedies for the evils he depics that all sober politicians must feel constrained to part company with him. The maintenance of diplomatic relations with the Sultan seems to constitute in his mind a kind of condonation of the crimes of the Porte. We confess we are quite unable to share this curious theory. The presence of our ambassador at Constantinople has been a curb on the evil counsellors of the Sultan and a moral support to the victims of his oppression. His withdrawal might doubtless hurt the vanity of the Sul-tan, but it would leave his hands freer than ever to take such vengeance as he thought fit on the Armenians." Regarding the suggestion made in the speech that the withdrawal of the ambassador be followed by a peremptory demand that Turkey comply with the British proposals, The Times says it regards Mr. Gladstone as being under the delusion that such a course would not induce a European war, and, anyhow, that he is willing that Great Britain should risk having to recede in face of United Europe. "In other words," The Times says, "we should threaten to coerce the Turks, while the Turks and everybody else knew that when we came in sight of war we would withdraw. This seems both a dangerous and cowardly policy." The Morning Post will to-morrow say: "Mr. Gladstone's speech will have a salutary effect at home and abroad. We hope it will operate to moderate the excesses of language, to which there has been some tendency in Great

The Daily News will strongly support Mr. Gladstone's suggestion that the British Ambassador at Constantinople be withdrawn. It says that this course is the only one that is consistent with Great Britain's dignity, Christianity and honor. The Standard will say to-morrow that Mr. Gladstone's avowal of confidence in the Government will dampen the ardor of a good many of the organizers of public meetings to protest against the Sultan and his rule. The the meeting was based gave greater paper sympathizes with Mr. Gladstone's utterances, but contends that "It was not expected that he would; indeed, he could not offer a remedy other than that which is being applied without increasing the misery which all desire to cure." Continuing The Standard says it cannot see what advantage could be gained by the withdrawal of the British Ambassador, unless the other Ambassadors were also withdrawn, which they assuredly would not be. Such an act is only intelligible when it is the prelude to declaring war. If the Ambassadors were withdrawn Great Britain's small influence at the Yildiz Kiosk would become none and the field would be absolutely open to intrigues, which even now it is not easy to counteract. denial, which will continue just as The Standard asks what is likely to be gained by public demonstrations, ending in a confession of impotence. It urges the Government to continue to co-operate with the other powers, and not to enter upon rash enterprises, despite them. In conclusion, the paper although he ventured to anticipate says: "Heavier responsibilities than that the words spoken at the meeting | Lord Salisbury carries no man ever would find their way to the palace at | had. Happily the nation believes that he is equal to it. We gather from Mr. Gladstone's speech that he shares our

Mr. Gill, the keeper of the hotel at Antwerp at which John F. Kearney and Haines, two of Ivory's alleged fellow-conspirators, stopped while in that city, was put on the stand. Gill is a brother-in-law of Kearney. He identified photographs of Kearney and Haines, who are under arrest in Rotterdam, and P. J. Tynan. He said the three men had been at his hotel. The committee recommended that no wines or other bewerages be served to anyone after 12 o'clock midnight, and that the restaurant and wine room

The Debates Committee had a meeting this morning, when the appointment of three translators to take the places of those who are to be dropped as a result of the vote in the House yesterday was considered. There were eighteen applications and two sets of names were proposed, one by Mr. Monet, the other by Mr. Beausoleil. One of the men proposed by Mr. Monet, it appears, is his law partner. The committee decided to leave the matter over, and it was also agreed that Messrs. Macleod, Bouchard and Vanasse should finish up

A large deputation waited on the Prime Minister and Dr. Borden, Minister of Militia, this morning in regard to the claims of men who risked their lives at the time of the Fenian Raid a force of 25,000 men and 32,000 responded. ENGLAND AND RUSSIA. Change Noted in the Attitude of the Bussian Press Towards Great Britain -Germany Annoyed. London, Sept. 28 .- The morning papers devote some attention to the sudden change in the attitude of the Rus-

Of these The Bourse Gazette and The Novosti warn the Government to beware of forcing England to join the Dreibund, hinting that Germany is annoyed at England's aloofness from that alliance, and is trying to sow discord between England and Russia. The newspapers make note of the fact that the change of face on the part of the Russian press is coincident with Lord Salisbury's arrival at Ballater for a conference with the Czar.

by a Ruraway Team Near Cobourg on Saturday.

Cobourg, Ont., Sept. 26 .- On the Baltimore road last night just at dusk a team belonging to a farmer ran away. They were attached to a wagon which had a hay rack on it. When crossing a small bridge near Baltimore the wagon collided with a horse and buggy driven by two young men from Cobourg. They just dodged their heads as the runaway outfit tore the top, the seat and hind wheels from their buggy and threw the occupants into the ditch. The young men escaped with a few bruises, while their buggy was completely demolished.

London, Sept. 25 .- A terrific northeast gale prevailed last night in the Bristel Channel off Cornwall and elsewhere along the coasts, doing a great deal of damage. Several sailing vessels were driven ashore in the Bristol Channel and off Cornwall, and the steamer Teutonic, from Liverpool, Sept. 24, for New York, was delayed at Queenstown four hours, after which the storm abated somewhat, and she proceeded on her voyage at 7.45 o'clock this morning.

The barques Agder and Baron Hoburg were wrecked off Folkestone during the night. The crews of both vessels were saved.

A large number of coasting vessels were unable to make a safe offing, and were thrown ashore at Holyhead, Sheerness, Dover and Yarmouth. So far as known all the men on these wrecked vessels were saved by the lifeboats and coastguards. Isolated cases of drownings have been reported from different places along the coast. At Yarmouth the wind blew with hurricane force, its velocity being 50 miles an hour. Many buildings were unroofed or otherwise damaged, and in some places standing crops were completely destroyed. The steamers of other lines running to the Continent were greatly delayed, and their non-arrival under the cfrcumstances caused much anxiety among those who had relatives and friends aboard of them. Grateful Women Write Us Letters. From every corner of the country come thankful letters written by those who have been lifted into cheerful, vigorous, healthy strength by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Thousands on thousands of women have been relieved of the nerve-nagging drag of weakness and pain. They have been made better wives and better mothers by having perfect health restored, and without the humiliating exposure of examinations so generally insisted on by physicians. The stereotyped treatment by "local applications" is seldom necessary, and there is no reason why modest, sensitive women need submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is of purely vegetable composition and is perfectly harmless in any condition of the system. It exerts a wonderful soothing, healing and strengthening power over woman's delicate organism. It is an invigorating tonic for the whole system, and is almost an infallible specific for the peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and painful derangements of woman.

To these causes may be traced the trouble of tired, nervous, irritable, wornout women. Careless, easy-going doctors frequently treat their women patients for biliousness, nervousness, dyspepsia, liver or kidney troubles, when the real sickness is in the organs distinctly feminine, and no help can come till they are made perfectly strong and healthy in both tructure and function which is brougth about in due time, by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription Prescribed for 30 years by Dr. Pierce.
