The Canadian Post.

LINDSAY, FRIDAY, OCT. 16, 1896.

THE POST'S NEW STORY.

Our subscribers cannot with justice complain that THE POST is dull or uninteresting when they receive weekly ten large pages filled with the choicest and freshest telegraphic news from all quarters of the globe, as well as a very complete summary of local and district events gathered by our correspondents and reporters. We are ever striving to make THE POST a better paper for the home, and are cheered by the fact that in addition to a constant accession of new subscribers we receive many encouraging letters from persons who have taken the paper for many years, and whose words of commendation are highly appreciated.

Owing to the demands made upon our space, first by the election contests and later by the reports of the fall fairs, we have been unable to give our usual complement of story. This unavoidable omission will now be repaired; for the next two months we purpose printing a series of short but intensely interesting tales, and the first issue of the new year will contain the opening chapters of a serial story that will captivate old and young. Between now and the first of the year will be a capital time for new subscribers to join, as the paper will be mailed to any address in Canada or the United States until January 1st, 1898, for the small sum of One Dollar.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Winnipeg paper says that Lord Aberdeen, when he reaches that city on his way to the Pacific coast, will swear in Attorney-general Sifton as minister of the interior.

Up till Oct. 1st the fire losses in the States and Canada were $90,088,700, against $96,277,900 for 1895, and $97,602,900. These are piping times for the insurance men.

There is some talk of moving Thanksgiving Day on till the fourth Thursday in November, a week later than the present date. Would it not be better to move it two weeks in the other direction?

Among the many promising persons mentioned as probable senators is Mr. H. H. Burnham, of Port Hope, the president of the reform association of East Durham. Mr. Burnham's accession to such an office would be very gratifying to a host of friends.

The World's Montreal correspondent nominates Sir Oliver Mowat for a place on the judicial committee of the Imperial privy council. He is doing excellent work in his present position and is quite to young at 75 to think of being banished from his native land or shelved upon the bench.

Czar Nicholas left 100,000 francs to be distributed among the poor in Paris. The money was contributed by the poor of St. Petersburg. The Lord loveth a cheerful giver, when the gifts are earned by honest labor of the benevolent donor. But robbing one poor man to enrich another is not charity.

The receipts in Britain of Canadian and United States apples up till Saturday aggregated about 600,000 barrels. At the corresponding date last year only 35,000 barrels had been landed. There is no trade in which the most scrupulous care in selection and packing pays better than in the apple export trade.

Mr. Tarte writes to La Patrie explaining his course in connection with the prosecution of one Greenier who has libelled him in the columns of an obscure publication printed in Montreal. He says: "I am a journalist, and thus far my pen has been a sufficient weapon for me. If I had not been minister I would have left Greenier to rave at will. But I believe that it is good policy to make immediate proof, at the outset of the regime, that we are resolved to rule in accordance with the principles of justice and honor. Dishonest men, knaves, boodlers, will find in us unshakeable resistance." This places the position in a nut shell.

Hamilton Times: Queer folk, those Toronto Puritans. They are so careful of the Sabbath that the very thought of an electric current moving on Sunday gives cardaic spasms, yet the mayor last Sunday took a ballot vote of the car operators as to their views on hours of labor.

Toronto Telegram: Joy irradiates the soul of Hon. Geo. E. Foster when he remembers that the shoulders of Laurier are now burdened with the troubles under which the old government staggered. Sorrow overcasts the sky of Mr. Foster's feelings when he remembers that the pockets of Laurier are likewise burdened with the salary which each member of the old government was wont to draw.

The czar of all the Russias wanted to go around incognito and see the Paris elephant, but the chief of police refused to take him, lest some accident should befall the imperial sightseer. The czarina ought to pull her hubby's hair for even thinking of such naughtiness Neither the Prince of Wales nor the Emperor of Germany would go around incog., and the Sultan of Turkey doesn't have to.

The resignation of Lord Rosebery as leader of the British liberals had to come sooner or latter, and the excuse of a difference of opinion on the Armenian question is as good as any other. The abolition of aristocratic privilege and a fair distribution of the wealth produced by labor are the great coming questions in British politics, and no lord can properly lead a party determined upon radical reform.

The usual complaints are being made in connection with fall fairs that people exhibit things that are not their own production and take prizes on them, to which, under the rules, they are not entitled. It is difficult to see how this can be prevented. The legislature can do nothing more than pass laws affecting the matter, leaving it to the authorities to enforce them. There is said to be more crooked work done in connection with the fall fairs than outsiders have any idea of.

The Winnipeg Tribune expresses some regret that the portfolio of the interior has not been filled, and seems to imagine the efficiency of the department may be impaired in consequence. This is not the case. The Hon. R. W. Scott is acting as the minister and brings his experience as commissioner of crown lands with him into the department. There has been no complaints as to the administration of the business, and a little delay more or less is, now that the session is over, of comparatively small moment.

The government did well in knocking off the usual supply of trunks and stationery to senators and members of parliament. The practice had grown to be a scandal, thousands of dollars being spent every year in supplying stationery which no human being could use up during the session, and to which the members were not entitled for their private use. The senators were more extravagant than the commoners, but both alike were parties to a wasteful expenditure of public funds. It was high time that the leak was stopped, and the liberal government deserve credit for stopping it, even if some of their own friends were against it.

L'Electeur charged that the Quebec post-office had been grossly mismanaged; that it had been operated as a partisan machine, copies of grit papers being suppressed or charged extra rates while tory papers and campaign literature were sent through free. The chief post-office inspector has just concluded an inquiry and reports that there were general and gross irregularities in respect to such matters, and that the officials have been "reprimanded." If the post-master-general permits the matter to rest there he is not the man we take him to be. Reprimands are not the proper punishment for such violations of duty.

The agricultural question is attracting attention in France at present. In a recent issue of "La Croix et Courone" it calls attention to the alarming increase in the candidates for the so-called liberal professions, and the apparent abandonment of the soil. It shows that only 800 students have presented themselves for the study of agriculture and kindred subjects during a year, while on the other hand there have been 8,776 law students 7,728 medical students, 2,668 in pharmacy, and 5,032 in sciences and letters. Thirty-six millions of people and 800 agricultural students! This is a bad sign for France, but at the same time Canada must not forget that very similar conditions prevail here. The problem should be faced before it assumes the alarming proportions witnessed in France, and which threatens he future existence of the country.

It would seem that Lord Rosebery was a better foreign secretary than leader of the liberal party. His resignation of the leadership of the party would indicate that it lacks cohesion and unity of opinion. Taken all in, all there are very few in the old country who would be inclined to agree with Mr. Gladstone that Great Britain should take upon herself the hazardous and certainly thankless task of dealing single handed with the Eastern question. England may be great on land and sea, but in view of her responsibilities it would be the extreme of folly for her to rush into an undertaking which, in the present condition of European affairs, would be equivalent to courting serious disaster. She has, it is true, had to contend single-handed with Europe in arms against her, but as there is no need for her to court such a condition of affairs, her statesmen are undoubtedly wise in exhausting all the resources of diplomacy before drawing the sword.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A Questionable Appropriation.

[To the Editor of THE POST.]

SIR,—I noticed in your daily of the 7th inst, that the town council had requested the secretary-treasurer of the late reception committee to pay over to the town treasurer the surplus, $17.33, of their appropriation, as they choose to call it. It seems to me an unwarrantable procedure, to say the least, to unceremoniously claim five-eighths of the county's money under the pretence that the county's grant was spent first.

Now, sir, if both amounts were placed to the credit of the secretary-treasurer of the committee, as they certainly were, then this officer, in the regular order of such proceedings, becomes subordinate to the dictates of some higher authority, which in this case was significantly named the executive committee, which body had the sole right to sanction and control the affair. Then, under such a system, where can there be either a difference or distinction respecting the paying out of these amounts? I don't think the spirit of the motion ever intended any such provision, and it would be a pity if it did, for it would only show an unkind act in return for a generous gift. There is enough of financial stratagem abroad in the world without our town council jeopardizing the public trust by any such subterfuge on such an occasion.

Now, sir, if I have got a wrong impression, or have been misformed on the subject, an explanation from the proper parties will be very satisfactory to a

RESIDENT OF THE COUNTY.

How to Win Prizes at Fall Fairs.

[To the Editor of THE POST.]

SIR,—I am a regular exhibitor at our agricultural shows, and attend church regularly on Sabbath. I make a specialty of the fruit department, and calculate to make quite a good thing of it—that is, for a man in a small line of business. The way I manage is something like this: I get all the prize lists and read them through, all except the rules, which are a kind of humbug, anyway. Some people advise spraying the fruit trees when the show season is on. I take a good look round the orchards and find out who has the best fruit. I generally take Sabbath afternoons for this, as it does not interfere with anything else. Of course I pick up a few specimens in this way. Then, if any of my neighbors have anything choice which they don't care to show, I can generally borrow enough to help along I also pay strict attention to each show, and as exhibitors have mostly got through with their fruit after their own show is over, I manage to pick up a greater part of most of the prize stuff. It is necessary to be particularly careful in the selection, and I generally look the fruit over before exhibiting elsewhere, to see that there are no distinguishing marks. You can understand that without much trouble I gather in from $20 to $30 at the different shows I attend, and naturally enough make more at the later shows than I do at the earlier. I thought it would be quite interesting to you, Mr. Editor, to know what a little enterprise will do, and I think I may be held up as an example to some of the young men who stand around doing nothing half the time. I forgot to mention that I have an uncle who does something of the same kind in the root and vegetable line, and my sister-in-law has an idea that next year she will take up with the shows in the ladies' department, as many ladies of her acquaintance make large sums by taking prizes on the same goods annually. We shall probably go into partnership and save the three members' tickets, as every little helps. If you want more tips on shows from parties high up in the business, you cannot do better than enquire from
