Quackery is always discovering remedies which will act upon the germs of disease directly and kill them. But no discovery has ever yet been approved by doctors which will cure consumption that way. Germs can only be killed by making the body strong enough to overcome them, and the early use of such a remedy as Scott's Emulsion is one of the needed strength, such as

He also referred to the bridge across the St. Lawrence, and assured his listeners that it would have a generous support from the Government. Referring to the Intercolonial Railway and its diversion from Quebec to Montreal to find a terminus, the Premier said that he understood the situation thoroughly, and proceeded to recount a history of the Intercolonial Railway from the time of its construction from Halifax, N.S., to River du Loup, and later the purchase of the branch of the G.T.R. from the latter place to Chaudiere Junction by the Mackenzie Government. The I.C.R. was a trrible drag on the country and instead of paying even its running expenses, unfortunately showed a deficit every year, at times as much as $1,000,000. That something had to be done to stop this terrible leakage and burden on the Government there was no doubt, and after a careful and practical study the conclusion was arrived vould enable the I.C.R. to compete with ther railroads, and especially the G.T. Green was working in a wheat bin with William Paulucci, and by some means, when there were six or seven feet of grain in the bin, got his feet in the hole at the bottom of the bin. The weight of the wheat immediately drew him down and, seeing his danger, Paulucci attempted to extricate him, The weight of the wheat was too great, however, and Paulucci himself had a narrow escape from meeting a similar fate, being drawn down to his waist. A hole was cut in the floor of the bin and the wheat was allowed to drop to the next floor. Green's body also came through the hole, but life was extinct-Altogether the victim was under the wheat fully 15 minutes.

It is hard to describe the scene that followed the formal discharge of W. H. Ponton. The friends of the popular bank clerk crowded over the railings the west, and predicted that the grain surrounding the officials' table and showered congratulations. He shook hands with his lawyers and the reporters, and with tears of joy in his eyes and a big lump of thanksgiving in his throat expressed his gratitude to those who had so faithfully stuck to him in his troubles. Afterwards he was accorded several ovations at different parts of the town, until he reached the train which took his mother and himself to Belleville, where they spent Sunday. A heavy rainstorm did not prevent the court house being well crowded when the case was resumed Saturday morning. The clouds cleared away and the crowd increased, and in the afternoon the place was filled to its fullest capacity. Friends of the accused sat or stood up in all parts of the building and listened with the greatest interest to the struck by some train while walking evidence, particularly that of the prisoner, who made a much better witness than he did yesterday. After Ponton's testimony had been concluded half a dozen witnesses gave evidence in explanation of the unenviable position the prisoner was in. When Ponton took the stand this morning he looked perfectly at ease, and appeared to wish to answer all questions put to him to the best of his financial dealings. Then Mr. Madden referred to those racing affairs, and witness replied at great length as to his small ventures on the course. The cross-examination proceeded, and witness said in ans ver

"I don't know who was last in my room on the night of Aug. 27. I had two drinks and a cigar with Hawley at the Paisley House. The bar may or may not have been closed for the night. Hawley and I were the only two in the bar. I do not think it had been closed. I swear there was no man in my room on Saturday night till 4 a.m. four weeks before the robbery. I have never had a man in my room as late as 4 in the morning. I was sometimes away in Belleville over Sunday, but left no one in charge of my rooms, and took the key with me. I possibly expressed to Mr. Durand dissatisfaction at the salary I was getting. I knew Durand was coming home on the Sunday after the robbery. We knocked around a lot together and sometimes had a drink. We did not drink to excess. After taking a couple of drinks we have goue over to the bank. was there." At Mr. Madden's request, Ponton named several of his associates who had been in the bank at night. Particular questioning was indulged in regarding Stapleton, a baseball player, who was here last summer, and the witness replied: "Stapleton came here from Oshawa or Fredericksburg. I did not bring him here. I made arrangements to have him board at the Parsley House, and I have not yet paid that bill, although I Weinstein, 282 King-street east, is lying had $80 in my pocyet book.
