A Reprehensible Trick. The firemen turned out Tuesday night about 7.30 in answer to an alarm sent in from Box 14, but it proved to be a Halloween joke. Later on nearly every box on the system was pulled, but no attention was paid to the calls. Had a fire occurred it would have been necessary to send a messenger to the fire hall, and valuable property might have been endangered as a result of the delay. There is a heavy penalty for tampering with the alarm boxes, and the police should endeavor to trace some of the offenders.

THE C. O. JOHNSTON LECTURE.

A Fair Attendance at Cambridge-st. Methodist Church Last Evening.

"The best I have ever heard," was the general expression made up of by those who attended Cambridge-st. Methodist church last evening and heard Rev. C. O. Johnston, of Toronto, deliver his popular lecture "Seven Different People, of Whom You are One." The rev. gentleman is a lecturer of high repute. He is a clever reader of human nature, which gives him great scope in the treatment of his complex subject.

We are, he said, constantly reading each other; what is genuine in us is easily seen, and that which is hypocritical is likewise soon read by others through our actions. The difficult classes of people touched upon were, first, the Prodigal, the man who has not found the great possibilities that are in this life for him, the one who does not possess himself. The Crank was the second subject—the one-sided man, the overdone and underdone, and out of balance individual. The third character was passed over. Woman came under the fourth head. She is incapable, beautiful, virtuous and sympathetic, yet the speaker laid the charge against her of being less willing to hoist the moral standard than are men. Were women as particular as to the character and morals of the men with whom they associate, as are men concerning the reputation and morals of the women of their companionship, then the world would take one grand bound toward the millennium. The Working Man was the fifth character. Too many are working for money and not for the work's sake. Artists formerly painted for the pleasure of art, but now work for money as high a standard as in former days. The sixth character was the Politician—the one who wants the country to do something for him, and unlike the true statesman, who does his best to do something for his country. The seventh character was the Christian—the highest, best balanced and freest of all. He one who enjoys the things that do not perish, the man who lives where he prays, and feeds upon the food of God. "Of all these classes," said the speaker, in conclusion, "I trust you belong to the latter."

Miss Winters favored the audience with a solo, being accompanied by Mrs. Koyl. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. are to be congratulated on the intellectual treat given by Rev. C. O. Johnston.

Valuable Horse Drowned. Mr. G. H. M. Baker, local agent for the Rathburn Co., met with a serious loss Monday in the drowning of his well-bred roaster. The animal had not been driven much of late, and in order that he might have needed exercise he was hitched to a wood delivery wagon. About 2.30 Monday the driver, a young lad named Coy, thinking the animal might be thirsty, hooked him into the river below Doris' boat house, but unfortunately lost control of him, and the poor beast was drowned before help arrived.

Halloween Pranks. A great deal of mischief was perpetrated Tuesday night by boys who formed into large parties for the purpose. In the east ward some walks were torn up and ramshackle buildings wrecked, but the boys were not in it with the north ward crowd, who devoted themselves to the work of destruction with a pertinacity worthy of a better cause.
