What the People Want

have entered into the serious consideration of this question have come to the reasonable conclusion that, owing to the ressed state of the market for Agricultural Products, money be very scarce with every class of the community, and the eatest economy will have to be exercised by the great ority of the people of this County. The cry will be "Hard times" and "the wants will be few." There is no disguising the fact—it is here and staring us in the face.

The people will want only real necessities and they will want them cheap.

We have come to realize this fact, and we are prepared to meet

We have the required Goods in every department in abundance, and we will sell them cheap.

Despite the fact that nomination day is but a little more than a week distant not the faintest mosphere, and appearances would indicate that the old council stands a chance of being returned by acclamation. No doubt that will not occur, and in several instances it would be most undesirable. Just now the town is much in undesirable. Just now the town is much in need of shrewd, progressive men to direct its affairs, and these should be singled out and asked to accept office for the public good. It would be an admirable thing if some young business men could be induced to stand. Barrie and several other towns tried the experiment last year with most satisfactory results. Let the people think the matter over and act upon it nomination day.

Ready for Christmas. We all know that the Christmas season is a trying one for the ladies. Their affectionate are safer than others. A lacy would have to be very sure of sizes or preferences to buy some articles of men's apparel, but with a slender knowledge of a man's peculiar notions she might buy some of those soft delicious Cashmere and Silk Mufflers or a few of Fairweather & Co.'s Peerless Christmas Neckwear, either being especially acceptable to the masculine mind. —Examination of Lindsay separate school. -Many friends in this neighborhood will regret to learn of the death of Mr. Joseph Pym, hotel keeper of Minden, and brother of Mr. Wm. Pym, the well known conductor on the Haliburton mixed. It will be remembered that a couple of months ago the deceased had his thigh-bone broken and lung trouble set in as a consequence of his confinement. Conductor Pym had been off duty for some weeks attending him, but on Friday last left for Haliburton to resume his duties, his brother appearing to be rapidly mending, but when he reached that yillage found a telegram apprising him that his brother had died shortly after he left. The body was taken through to Port Hope Saturdsy morning, the remains being accompanied by the family and a ceputation from the local lodge of Oidfellows, of which deceased was a member.

The market on Saturday was very well attended, the prices obtained were good, and the supply was fair. A great many complains are being continually indulged in by both the buyers and sellers on account of the very inselect accomm dation affirded in the town's present market building. There is no reason in the world why Lindsay should not have one of the best markets in Canada and derive the benefits and revenue that would naturally result from buyers coming from outside and paying cash to the sellers, as well as drawing trade that now goes to Peterboro and other places. Hamilton, Chatham, Brantford, Woodstook, St. Thomas and other towns have been paying attention to their market and each are good, and the market and each are coming from Quebec and the markitime provinces. The Review says the Dominion is well supplied with the blood of the greatest and best trotting sires known to the breeding world, but there is a lack of superior brood mares. Too much money has been spent upon stallions, because the return from the investment is immediate, while a mare does not result in profit for speed of a high order.

The subject was most able handled, his theory being buttressed by numerous biblical texts that allow

-Sunday evening last Rev. T. M. Campbell of the Cambridge-st. Methodist church spoke on temperance. His subject was "The Slaughter House," and his text was taken from Proverbs, vii., 22, "As an ox goeth to the slaughter," etc. vii., 22, "As an ox goeth to the slaughter," etc.
The bar-room was pourtrayed as an institution created by our Christian civilization and legislated for and protected by government. The first principle of all government is the protection of human life, but through the liquor traffic seven thousand lives are sacrificed yearly for the sake of a revenue of about five and a half millions of dollars. That is to say, while a man's life is estimated to be worth from $2,500 to $5,000 in case of death through a preventable accident, a paternal government only places a value of $750 upon the life sacrificed by overindulgence in the terrible drug constantly set -At the regular meeting of Faithful Brethren lodge A. The Yankee jockeys have evolved a new scheme for infusing life into jaded nags. Last week at Roby, Ill., the judges noticed that every time a jockey named Kuhn used his spurs his mount leaped about 15 feet, and when he came in he was taken in hand and searched. It was found he were a broad belt fitted up as an electric battery, and wires ran down to the spurs. It was dead easy to understand why the horse jumped when the spurs touched him.

It appears, according to Clarke's American Horse Review, that three years ago less than ten Canadian performers entered the 2.30 list, and 1890 did not see the list increased. Last year no less than 53 dipped into the charmed circle, and this year 35 trotters and 11 pacers have qualified, and adding 14 trotters and 13 pacers which have reduced their records, the total is 73—a marked increase that is perhaps total is 73—a marked increase that is perhaps not equalled by any state in the union.
