

W. M. TEA MEETING.

The Tea Meeting in the Wesleyan Methodist Church, last Monday evening, was one of the best conducted ever held in this town. The arrangements were admirable, and reflected the greatest credit upon the young people of the congregation, by whom the affair was projected and carried out. Tea was served in the basement, where the guests were comfortably seated around neatly spread tables, laden with most tempting viands, and those who acted as waiters completed the satisfactory feeling of their visitors by prompt and good-natured attention. The tables were twice surrounded, and when the second company were admitted, not a trace of the first remained, everything being as trim and tidy as if a whole day had been allowed for the arrangements, and they had been undisturbed since. Rev. Dr. Fowler invoked the Divine blessing, and the clatter and chatter which followed bespoke an audience at peace with themselves and entertainers. When all returned to the church above ground, Mr. R. J. Oliver was called to the chair.

Rev. D. McDowell, of Barrie, addressed the assembly in an appropriate and witty speech. He referred to the necessity for liberality in supporting our churches; referred to the grandeur and simplicity of that religion which afforded scope for Infinite Wisdom, yet was within the grasp of the feeblest intellect, and said the person who has not benevolence is devoid of one of the finest feelings that can animate the human heart.

Rev. John Gemley, of Toronto, followed in an address replete with Irish drollery and pathos which delighted and impressed all who heard it. He said it would not be beneficial to a congregation or community to have individuals undertake the whole burden or expense of erection of their church or other public works. The exertions and sacrifices necessary for this purpose were the fountain of healthy interest and love for religious and moral institutions. In proportion to the value and beauty of the churches will be found the hold of a religion upon the hearts of the people, and the more difficult it will be to eradicate that religion, if true. He referred to the beauty of the Roman Catholic Cathedrals of Europe, and then to the magnificent Protestant Cathedrals of Ireland and England, and the Presbyterian Churches which adorn the cities of Scotland. He felt no envy of the other Protestant denominations which excelled his own in the beauty and costliness of their Church architecture—on the contrary, he thanked God for the evidence it afforded of the hold a religion he believed to be true had obtained over the hearts of the people. In this Province, the Wesleyan Methodists have one of the most magnificent metropolitan churches, and the fact excited no feelings of envy or ill-will in the minds of members of other denominations. The minor differences of denominationalism foster the growth of Christianity, and where the attempt had been made to suppress these by co-operation, the dominant church had lost its spirituality, and become dead. It afforded him the greatest pleasure to see the different denominations of Christians unite in social matters with freedom. Urged large-hearted liberality and the utmost liberty in dealing with other denominations, citing the words of the Divine Master whom they all serve, "No man which shall do a miracle in my name can lightly speak evil of me."

The choir furnished music at intervals during the evening. Votes of thanks were tendered to the ladies who assisted in getting up the entertainment, to the choir, and to the chairman. Rev. John Gemley closed the proceedings by pronouncing the benediction.

Editor of THE EXPOSITOR:

Sir,—"Justice Watchman" failed in showing one half of what is going on in Thorold. Robinson's sidewalk jobbing is only another link in the chain of his arbitrary and selfish career to cope with laying the public plank down to the threshold of his own door. The jobbing of Ross, the Contractor, commissioner, and contractor, at Morrison's Bridge, according to first contract, gave way when almost finished, dragging a team and wagon to the bottom of the creek. A little extra money got new strengtheners, and in met a new contractor, the old one having gone down stream. The bridge is now like a blockade than a bridge. It is fortunate there are no save logs going that way, for if there were that monster self would have put in his nose and said, "Ross you must make better work here—look at my saw logs." Again, Ross, contractor, took the contract for building a drill shanty of which the township paid $250, besides the land. Donald's official oath forbids any contract, directly or indirectly. However, his supporters are generally of a hasty casting and will balance for the mistake. Robinson and Paterson are kicked out of office by the Agricultural Society. Want of confidence, I believe to be the cause. Paterson had his work almost completed. He used the Society as a tool for building the drill shed, which is so much money cast away. What is the principal feature of an army? Is it not discipline? Last spring, ex-Captain Paterson took the gun from one of his privates to show him how to use it, as he thought knew best. The private refused to take the gun again, and Paterson had to carry it from parade ground to the place of rendezvous. If such discipline would be efficient in active service, I leave the reader to judge. The whole military system is a burden on the country, and no benefit will ever be derived from it. Limeridge for example is a fair test. The drill ground is to fence and soil to carry on it. It is not fit for anything in its present state—it would not pasture a grasshopper. The society or the township must do this. We will see which will be tried first. To the farmers I would say, keep your dollar till the Directors pledge themselves to buy a bull. It is time enough to build a cage when you have got a bird to put into it. Such are the double shuffles of the past, or rather scraps from them, as THE EXPOSITOR would not hold half the豪爽 schemes. Believing that as a country progresses around any village, in like proportion will that village flourish, for the future let us look for better management.
