The Agricultural Society.
 Editor of THE EXPOSITOR:
 Sir.—It seems strange, but true, that the editor of the Packet should be so persistent in endeavouring to have a fling at the Agricultural Society, or some of its members, whenever he imagines an opportunity presents itself. Why he makes himself so ridiculous in this respect, I know not, unless his frail brain is afflicted at times by a change in the moon. Your readers may recollect the trouble he was in, about a year ago, over what he termed "Agricultural Deception," and, although I am sure he would not do it again, for that purpose if such were the case. For that purpose one of the Directors called upon the editor of the Packet, and the question being asked who this Judas might be, he declined to answer, but said if three or four of the Directors demanded the name, he would give it. At the next meeting the matter was again discussed, and four of the Directors appointed to call on the editor for the promised information; but not knowing the shallowness of the individual then as well as they do now, they were surprised when he said he would give it. The Directors then considered he was alone responsible for the slander, and the result of the meeting was a unanimous vote of censure upon his conduct towards the Society. I draw attention to the above in order to show his past conduct towards the Society as a Society; and his recent attack upon myself and the Secretary, is just as unreasonable, and the statements as untrue. So far as the Secretary of the Society is concerned, he is capable of taking care of himself, but as I have been implicated in what the Packet calls "White-washing," I am charged by the same sheet with "inconsistency," "palpable falsehood," &c. Now, Mr. Editor, I would just say that it is well known I am no hand to write for newspapers; neither am I known to talk very much; but what I do say I say prepared to prove; and for truthfulness and "consistency," I endeavour to come as near the mark as possible. But I will leave this part with those who know me. His charges that I stated to him, or any one else, anything inconsistent with my course at the last meeting of the Society, I most distinctly say is untrue. On the contrary, I do assert, and I believe I am expressing the opinion of nearly every member of the Society, that the course of the Packet towards the Society has been inconsistent and unjust, not because it can furnish no title of evidence that the Directors of the Society are acting in any way but for the interests of the farmers, and the public generally, but merely because he is prejudiced against two or three of its members, and in this way he is doing his petty spite. I think your readers will justify these remarks, when he charges such men as Arch. Thompson, John Rutherford, Wm. Calverly and others as being Sutherland's service clique, who are old and respectable known in the Society years before even the Packet was in existence; and I think will be favourably known after the same has ceased to exist, unless his line of charge, and the security of his charge, may, perhaps, be speaking against an innocent man, when I direct my charges against the editor, not knowing who he may be, as it is generally supposed that there are several who take a hand in the Packet's management, and some of them, I fear, of only very ordinary responsibility. In conclusion, I would say that as President of the Society, it is necessary that I should reply, and endeavour to show up the relation between the Packet and the Society in its true light. Let any one who is not already acquainted with the facts, might be prejudiced against joining a Society whose Directory is composed of such a "servile clique" as the editor alluded to would wish to make out. However, I am happy to state that the Society was never in such a flourishing condition as at present.

PARLIAMENTARY PARAGRAPHS.

Mr. SMITH, of Peel, has moved for a select Committee of seven members to enquire into the question of Sunday traffic on railroads under the control of Parliament, with the view of reducing, if practicable, such traffic, and to extend to the railway employees the right and privilege the law gives to other citizens—one day of rest in seven.
 Hon. E. B. WOOD now represents West Durham in the House of Commons. It is a pretty good indication of the direction of public opinion that after all the bluster of the Ministerialists they could not induce any one to face the music against Mr. Wood. The Opposition at Ottawa have not only failed to secure additional seats but
