Ripe for the tomb. O, humble the proud and haughty heart, Make us like Him, the meek, the just, And may we learn, and really feel. We are but dust.

How fast the life of man doth pass, Ah, faster as the end draws near, Help us to await our coming fate,

Oh, without fear. Grouped in a circle round we stand, Before the dying bed, is seen With beating hearts and heaving sighs, The parting scene.

Hush! O hush, there are angels there, Hovering round her dying bed; Hark the humming of their pinions, Over her head.

Ready to bear the parting spirit, To the hands of Him who gave, Leaving the earthly frame to rest, In the dark grave.

O! is that wasted form my mother, So inanimate and cold, Are those the lips, that once so sweet, Sweet stories told, -Of places far beyond the sky, Where there's neither pain nor care, Where angels bright in realms of light,

Are ever there. Is that my much loved mother dear, That shrivelled, faded form? Pleasing in mind, in hope and love,

In friendship warm. How sympathetic were the gleams, Sent from those now closed eyes, Which filled the heart with filial love,

That never dies.

Oft has she told on Sabbath eve, Of wisdom's pleasant ways, And brought the youthful heart to Him. In silent praise.

And pointed to that lonely mount, . Whereon his cross had stood, Who gave to all that precious gift, His cleansing blood.

Trusting, we contemplate the change And dry the falling tears, For she was ready, fully ripe, Aged eighty years And had the hope of blissful rest,

In Him, who is all love, He, who has said that his shall reign With Him above. Proud, haughty man, look on this form,

So shall thine be ere long, Rolled up in garments for the grave, In death's bands strong. This once loved form must now be laid, Beneath the cold, cold sod, Dust unto dust must be returned, The soul's with God.

HERE AND THERE,

He subsequently became ing the last six months. His stock either through personal complaint or a minister of the Gospel he had once (which is now very large) consists in a more sneaking mode.

"I AM on the bright side of seven- from the words, so eminently blessed ty," said an aged man of God, "the to his own soul: "What shall it probright side because nearer to ever. fit a man if he gain the whole world lasting glory." "Nature fails," said and lose his own soul?" another, "but I am happy." "My work is done," said the Countess of Huntington, when eighty-four years old, "I have nothing to do but to go to my Father." To an humble Christian it was remarked, "I fear you are near another world." "Fear it, sir!" he replied, "I know I am; but blessed be the Lord! I do not fear it, I hope it."

THE IMPORTANCE OF A WORD .-The importance of spelling correctly is most forcibly illustrated in the following case, which came up for trial in the Criminal Court of Baltimore, recently. The indictment in the case of John E. Green, charged with the embezzlement of $1500, was demurred to by his counsel, on the ground that in it the word "fraudently" was used for "fraudulently." The counsel cited the acts of the British Parliament in force in Maryland requiring indictments to be in the English language, and contended that the word used was unknown to the language, and was not a clerical error. Judge Gilmor sustained the demurrer and quashed in the indictment.

No great man ever had a fool for his mother. In the history of men of all departments of society distinguished for intellectual power, brilliancy and extraordinary mental capacity, their mothers, and not their fathers, as far as ascertained by philosophical investigations, were invariably superior in brain force. If women are physically feeble, the mind cannot be developed as when all the system is fully and healthfully in perfection. To have great men there must first be excellent women. Their deterioration by the debilitating frivolties of fashionable life are perpetuated in puny children. incapable of sustaining themselves prominently when their inheritance is gone.

THE religion which we should desire, seek after, and immediately obtain, is one that goes into the family and keeps the husband from being spiteful when dinner is late, and keeps the dinner from being late; keeps the wife from fretting when he tracks the new washed floor with his muddy boots, and makes the husband mindful of the scraper and the door-mat; keeps the mother patient when the baby is cross, and keeps the baby pleasant; amuses the children as well as instructs them; wins as well as governs; projects the honeymoon into the harvest moon, and makes the happy hours like the Eastern fig-tree, bearing in its bosom at once the beauty of the tender blossom and the glory of the ripening fruit. A BRACE OF NORTHERN RIRDS .-James F. Duncan and Robert Brackenbury, of Parry Sound, carried on business in that northern region as storekeepers up to about the beginning of last February, at which time their respective ereditors, in some anxiety, felt it incumbentupon them to institute enquiries as to the position of their affairs, led thereto by thestudied neglect which was shown to their communications, and failure of the customary remittances.
