"It will be very easy to trace him by the child," said the lawyer cheerfully, as the two gentlemen turned from the ticket office.

"My baby!" she cried out in a voice that to her father's heart.

CHAPTER VI. For many weeks the life of the bereaved mother was a life of unending sorrow.

THE hour was growing rather late when he arrived at the Waterloo Station.

That, I can safely promise, shall come to pass within the week, was the encouragement given by the lawyer.

"I am afraid I disagree with you," said Colonel Redrath anxiously.

"Stumped," said the lawyer, more forcibly than elegantly, a blank look overspreading his face.

"I will go for you," he said, after a pause. "Of course we shall recover the child, but we need a little time."

THE hour was growing rather late when he arrived at the Waterloo Station.

Notwithstanding the burden of grief, the recovery of Ignatia proved a relief.

"I have come here to talk to you," said Captain Redrath, "I have come here to talk to you."

"I have come here to talk to you," said Captain Redrath, "I have come here to talk to you."

"I have come here to talk to you," said Captain Redrath, "I have come here to talk to you."

"I have come here to talk to you," said Captain Redrath, "I have come here to talk to you."

He had no longer to become a beggar, and he had three months of the life of Ignatia when he abandoned her and me.

"I have come here to talk to you," said Captain Redrath, "I have come here to talk to you."

THE VALUE OF SMALL COURTESIES—Civility costs nothing, and is often productive of good results. A local doctor of medicine at Bath, England, has just had a letter from a lady who writes, "I was only known to you as a doctor, but I have been a patient of yours for some time, and I have been cured of my ailment."
