

For The Exporter.
A Day in June.

This is the twenty-third of June:
And merry hisses their notes do tune,
All nature smiles and seems to say
Old winter cold has passed away.

This is the twenty-third of June:
The sun darts down his rays at noon,
To make the berries red and sweet
For everyone to pick and eat.

This is the twenty-third of June:
The sun declines 'tis afternoon,
How pleasant is the cooling breeze,
Which gently fans the verdant trees.

This is the twenty-third of June:
The month is passing, and will soon
Be numbered with the days gone by,
How swiftly do the moments fly!

The sun goes down and sinks to rest,
How beautiful the golden west!
But soon its beauteous face away,
And thus rolls round another day.

The twenty-third of June is past,
To many it will prove the last,
May we the present time improve,
And gain eternal life above.

J. L.
June 23rd.

HERE AND THERE.

WHEN I did well, I heard it never; when I did ill, I heard it ever.

Wise men learn by other men's mistakes; fools by their own.

Mr. RUTLEDGE, the great London book publisher, is about to establish a branch establishment in Toronto.

An eccentric old fellow, who lives along side of a grave yard, was asked if it was not an unpleasant location to live in. He said he never jined places in all his life with a set of neighbors that minded their own business so stidly as they do.

To avoid the taste of bad medicine the mouth taste agrees to be made before instead of after numerous doses. In preparing the mouth for bitters use liquorice—for castor oil use orange or lemon peel—or aromatic substances. This way is very effectual.

The one who learns his trade best and most perseveringly, and conscientiously pursues it will gain golden approval, while those of genius and talent, who depend upon these qualities to bring them through without much personal effort or inconvenience, will fail.

Mr. SHIELDS, of Adelaide, expresses the opinion that the usual practice of sowing timothy in the spring is not generally profitable. Too often we have deposited same, which completely kill out the timothy, and leave nothing for next year.—His practice is to sow his timothy in the fall.—Canada Farmer.

OTTAWA boasts of an ingenious carpenter who saved lumber and labour in the manufacture of tree guards by shoving down the trunks of the trees they were designed to protect, so that they would fit nicely. It was much handier than making guards of larger pattern. People who contemplate planting tree guards around their premises should make a note of this labor-saving process.

"Be systematic in all your household duties," said Mrs. ELLIOT. "Have regular hours and require your servants to be punctual in keeping them. Always have a kitchen clock, and if the meals are on the table at the regular hour and you are not ready, do not scold them for not waiting. It may not be so palatable, yet there will be no disarrangement, as will be the case whenever the business of one hour is put off and crowded into that of another."

We were told an incident which occurred one day last week, too good to be lost. One of the emigrant girls was hired by a housekeeper of this town, and next morning she thought her new domestic would have breakfast ready when she descended from her room, but Betty had not the fire lighted, saying she could not make it burn. On examination it was found that the lightwood was smouldering in the oven.—Lindsay Warbler.

The habitual late-comer at church advertises himself or herself as a drone, a delinquent, a mope, a loner, an incubus, a conceited flit, a vain pretender, a mere automaton for the display of millinery or the courting of limited fatteries. These are hard words; but we can write no milder for the habitual late-comer to church.—They annoy religious assemblies and make havoc of devotional feelings. Let there be reform in this matter.

The Lippincott's publish a translation of a German romance, by Carl Latief, entitled "Must it be?" We suppose a companion volume will soon follow called "I S'pose So." But about the worst title yet for a book is "Widow Drops." It details the official experiences of Detective Brooks, of the revenue service, who was assaulted and shot in Philadelphia in 1869, by some roughs employed by the whiskey ring.

ABOUT EGGS.—Massachusetts has decreed that a dozen of eggs cannot be a legal dozen unless it weighs a pound and a half. The heads of the Bay State Legislators are level upon the subject at least as far as few persons have idea of the difference in the weight of eggs. A few years since we purchased several dozen from different farmers. Each dozen was carefully weighed at a drug store, the result proving that there was a discrepancy between the heaviest and the lightest dozen of a full half pound, and yet we paid the same price for each.—Exchange.

It was at the second battle of Bull Run that a cannon ball carried off a poor soldier's leg. "Carry me to the rear!" he cried to a tall Yankee companion, who had been fighting by his side. The Yankee caught the wounded soldier up, and as he was about to put him across his shoulder, another cannon ball carried away the poor fellow's head. The Yankee, however, in the confusion, did not notice this, but proceeded with his burden towards the rear. "What are you carrying that thing for?" asked an officer. "Thing?" returned the Yankee. "It's a man with his leg shot off." "Why, he hasn't any head!" cried the officer. The Yankee looked at his load, and for the first time saw that what the officer said was true. Throwing down the body he thundered out: "Confound him! he told me it was his leg!"
