

For The Exposure.
The Central Day.
This is the central day.
The second of July.
Half of the year has passed away.—
How swift the moments fly!
The new year seemed but just begun,
And now one-half its course is run.

This is the central day.
The second of July.
Nine score and two have rolled away
Into eternity.
Once more that number, and the year
Will close, no more to re-appear.

This is the central day.
The middle of the year;
Then let me daily watch and pray,
For death will soon be here:
Each moment as it quickly dies,
Proclaims to us that some one died!

This is the central day.
Quickly the time speeds on;
No time to idly sleep away.
Our lives will soon be gone:
Half of the year already past,
We know not who shall see the last.

May I, O Lord, improve
The time which Thou dost give,
That I at last with Thee above,
Eternally may live.
O may the remnant of my days
Be all devoted to Thy praise.

July 2.

An Incident of the War.
The dark horrors of war are relieved by occasional gleams of humanity, which make us feel all the more saddened by the recollections of the men who ought to be as brothers. During the investment of Metz, it was common for the German sentries at the outposts to leave a portion of their rations for the famished sentries of the besieged army. A day's rations were also willingly given up on the capitulation. One of the war correspondents of the London press describes the following scene:—"This afternoon I witnessed a very touching scene. A French soldier of the 33rd Line Regiment, belonging to the Corps of General Frossard, had been made prisoner at the outposts. He is a native of Jougny-sur-Arche, where his wife and children now live. En passant on his way to Corney, where the headquarters of the Prince are now situated, he asked permission to be allowed to see his wife and children. He said that the request was immediately granted. The poor woman, half-delirious with joy, asked to be allowed to accompany her husband at least to Corney. This was also acceded to; but then came the difficulty and could not carry her baby, and at home there was no one to mind it; as for the little chap of five—he could toddle along by his father's side. The difficulty was, however, overcome by a great big Pomeranian soldier, who volunteered to act as nurse. This man had been quartered close to the poor woman's house; and the little ones knew him, for he had often played with them. When, therefore, bidding the poor wife to be of good cheer, he held out his big strong arms to the little infant, it came to him immediately, and nestling its tiny head upon his shoulder, seemed perfectly content. So did the Prussian soldier carry the Frenchman's child. When I first saw the group, the wife was clasped in her husband's embrace, the little boy clung to his father's hand, and the Prussian soldier had fetched wood and water, had lit the fire, and helped her in their own rough, kindly way; until at last those two men, who belonged to countries now arrayed against each other in bitter hate, who perhaps a few days since fought the one against the other—embraced like brothers; whilst I, like a great big fool, stood by and cried like a baby. Hereafter, when alone in my folly, if I only be; several Prussian officers and soldiers followed my example—for we all had wives and children in far-off homes."

We know of no more pleasing present for a young lady than a volume of Peter's Musical Monthly, which gives an astonishingly large and fine collection of new music. The July number is excellent.

The Diocesan Synod of Montreal has suddenly sprung into a leading position in the Temperance reform. This suggests the happiest auguries for that cause, and also for the Church. When a body, all now held to be the most conservative of all, steps forward to lead the people in a movement for which the people themselves have long felt the dire need, there is little cause to fear the coming of intemperance.

"Go thy way and take the pledge; we have need of none."

I LOVE a woman with a heart; one whose heart is large enough to fill the whole sphere of her duties; I love a woman with singleness of purpose; whose words and actions are sincere, not one who studies effect in all she says and does, but one who sets and speaks from her heart, and whose genuineness of heart expresses itself in her looks, and this so kind and good a heart as to make those words, actions and looks lovely. I love a woman who lives for a purpose; one who does not drift through life, but one who sees the way of her duty clearly, and, with warm energies and steadfastness of aim, steers her course onward. You enter the house of the woman I love. The courtesy with which she receives you is not mere conventional; but is seasoned with genuine human kindness. Her conversation is not forced, not empty; warmth of heart, practical education, a refined mind, render her conversation pointed and pleasing. There is something genial and home-like in her rooms as well as in her manners;—and this is because her household arrangements are based on the refined taste, and desire to promote the comfort of others. Love of empty show enters not into her composition, and therefore you see no tokens of it. In the hour of trouble and perplexity, the woman I love shines forth as a bright and better angel. Unselfish of heart and pure of purpose, she sheds a golden radiance around her darkened path-way, and points to the beacon light ahead.

FATHER MANNING'S mantle has evidently fallen upon the shoulders of Father Nugent, of Liverpool, who is doing about as much for temperance as any man now in the flesh. Within the past fourteen months he has induced nineteen thousand drinkers to give up the habit, and seventy-five per cent. of that number have kept their pledges inviolate, notwithstanding the fact that the majority of them belong to the lower and meaner classes in the community. In February of last year he inaugurated a temperance league in one of the Catholic churches of Liverpool, and so successful was it that in two or three months he had branches in three or four other churches of the city. One branch alone comprises over three thousand persons, and the organization and enthusiasm are so complete, under the inspiration of the Rev. Father, that the work of redeeming men and women from drunkenness by moral suasion goes on at a marvellous rate. His work commenced in behalf of the men alone; but he has now begun to save many women who, in a great city, also fall into the vice of intemperance. He recently brought together, in a place known as New-some's Circus, about 1,500 women and girls who gained their living by hawking and wares through the streets. Never before were there so many bareheaded women brought together in the city, and for two hours they were kept perfectly happy by excellent music and a fund of appropriate amusement. After that he spoke to them upon temperance, while they listened to him with patience, and seemed to be much impressed.

MISCELLANEOUS.
WHAT maintains one vice would bring up two children.
What is given to the poor is laid out of the reach of fortune.
It is a mistake to discontinue your advertising in dull times.
WHAT reason and endeavour cannot bring out, time often will.
The Government says at Collingwood are used for Sunday excursions.
Charles Gavran Duffy, one of the Irish rebels of 1848, has been knighted by Queen Victoria.
THE habit of late attendance at Church is one which offends good manners and grieves the Holy Spirit.
A man who strives earnestly and perseveringly to convince others, at least convinces us that he is convinced himself.
"According to Milton, Eve kept silent in Eden to hear her husband talk," said a gentleman to his lady friend, and then added, in a melancholy tone, "Alas! there has been no Eve since." "Because there have been no husbands worth listening to," was the quick retort.
A MAN was brought before a Magistrate in the States the other day, and fined $8.50 for being drunk. He smiled blandly, and drawing out a dollar bill said: "All right Mr. Magistrate, I suppose you remember when I sold out my saloon in Fortin I had $8.50 on the slate against you. With this dollar that will exactly pay my fine. You must excuse me, for, for this little spree of mine; but I didn't see any other way of collecting my bill against you than this."

The greatest cause of sin is the immorality of alcoholism. This fact has been shown by statistics, for by far the greater number of sufferers have been accustomed to indulging too freely in intoxicating liquors. Cleanliness of another matter to be attended to. During the warm season occasional bathing should be resorted to. The pores of the skin are thus cleansed, and that dry, parched, and consequently dangerous state of the skin will be removed.
DROPPING A FOP.—A conceited snob, who was so fond of fine clothing that he revelled in them by day and dreamed of them by night, one evening visited a lady, and as he removed his overcoat, etc., in the hall, preparatory to entering the parlor, the lady overheard him uttering the following words. Taking his overcoat and hanging it up, he said: "Hang there, you five-dollar overcoat!" Pulling off his gloves and laying them on the table: "Lie there, you five-dollar gloves!" Placing his hat on the rack: "Hang there, you ten-dollar hat!" Putting his cane in the corner: "Stand here, you fifteen-dollar cane!" Then entering the parlor, he was about to sit down, when the lady pulled the chair from under him, and as she left the room, said: "Lie there, you round that house since."

THE NAME OF PROTESTANTISM took its rise from the following circumstances:—At a diet of the princes of the empire, held in Spire, in Germany, in the year 1529, it was decreed by the majority there present, that in those places where the edict of Worms had been received, it would be lawful for no one to change his religion; that in those places where the new religion (that is the Lutheran) was exercised, it should be maintained till the meeting of a council, if the ancient (the popish) religion could not be restored without danger of disturbing the public peace; but that the mass should not be abolished, nor the exercise of their religion, nor any one of them allowed to embrace Lutheranism; that the Sacramentarians should be banished from the empire; that the Anabaptists should be punished with death; and that no preachers should explain the gospel in any other sense than was approved by the church. Six princes of the empire introduced their protest against this decree; namely: John, Elector of Saxony; George, Margrave of Brandenburg; Ernest and Francis, Dukes of Brunswick and Lunenburg; Philip Landgrave of Hesse; Wolfing, Princes of Anhalt; and Wundolm; and from the protest the Lutherans first obtained the name of Protestants, which was afterwards given in common to all who separated themselves from the tyrannical and idolatrous practices of the Church of Rome.

MEN are sometimes said to be "in advance of their age," women never.
MISS BAXTER, a pious lady of Dundee, has given 2,000 guineas as a beginning towards equipping a vessel to carry missionaries to New Guinea.
DESPATCHES have been received by the British Government from Sir Samuel Baker, who reports that a large slice of Africa has been annexed to Egypt, and that a free road has been opened to Zanzibar. The mission of Sir Samuel Baker has been eminently successful.
THE hideous enormity of the crime of parricide, as looked on in heathen nations, may be judged by the fact that the Persians have no penalty for parricide, believing it to be impossible that any one could commit such a crime. Among the Chinese the whole family of a parricide were exterminated, and his very dwelling razed to the ground.
THE United States newspapers are revelling in the details of a touching and sad story of the mental derangement of a young lady, beautiful, accomplished, and an only daughter. The first symptom which attracted attention and excited alarm was that she was found by her mother in her own room energetically darning stockings. Soon afterwards she came into the kitchen and assisted that good lady in baking bread, pastry, and the like. Such striking symptoms of mental disorder naturally increased the already awakened fears in the maternal bosom. Paterfamilias was consulted, and a skilled physician was sent for, who watched her through a key hole, and found her sewing buttons on her father's shirts, and mending the garments of her little brother. The doctor declared that during a medical practice of twenty-five years he had never seen such symptoms as these before. In the hope of giving a new direction to her morbid thoughts, her father, a few days ago, offered her $200 to buy a new dress; she simply replied that she didn't need a new dress, and that if she might keep $25 to pay a poor widow's debts she would rather he would keep the remainder of the money himself. The grief-stricken parent fairly broke down under this convincing proof of her insanity, and burying his head in his hands he sobbed convulsively. "Her mind is gone! Her mind is gone!" It is said that there will be a consultation of the leading medical experts in the United States to examine this peculiar case with a special reference to the predisposing causes that have led to it, and whether there is any danger of its spreading.
