On the death of the Rev. J. P. Kennedy,

Had not the coffin been his bed, And mourners stood around him weeping

I hardly should have deemed him dead, But calmly, innocently sleeping. His hands were crossed upon his breast, As if some precious treasure guarding; A heavenly smile upon his face

Assured us of his Saviour's pardon. His faults were few, if faults he had, But Oh! his virtues far out-shone them A pure, a good, a holy life, Most always have a happy closing. He spent his life in acts of love,

But Charity was ne'er forgotten; His last wish was to save a soul, Oh! how his soul must shine in Heaven. Unmindful of himself or friends, Thought only of his fellow-creature; and God, who saw his sacrifice,

Made his reward so much the richer. He loved his flock! how well, 'tis proved I hope that flock was well deserving; For such a noble sacrifice A martyr's crown is his in Heaven. When sent for to the dying bed,

Was always ready day or night To go wherever duty called him. He always went, yes, night or day, It mattered not how cold or stormy; He's gone! I trust he is at rest, His path onearth was rough and thorny.

No epidemic e'er appalled him;

How beautiful in Heaven he shines, Wrapped up in his immortal glory; While we are left to mourn his fate, And listen to the sad, sad story Of him who while upon the earth,

Was good, was ever kind and true; faithful friend, a Pastor dear, To whom respect was always due. Through all his short but useful life, His thoughts were never bent on pleasure

His duty, if 'twas well performed,

Thy soul is glorious in Heaven,

O, if for one, so pure and good Aught for atonement Thou desirest; Then let his aged mother's tears Be all the ransom Thou requirest.

Was more to him than any treasure.

Lawson.) proceedings of the Committee have on various grounds been postponed, and the enquiry has not yet taken place. Gentlemen, no person can regret more deeply than I do these unfortunate delays. The more so, as they seem to have given rise to the impression that they have been unnecessarily interposed by the action of the Executive. It may be premature at this moment to enter into a history of the disallowance of the Oaths Bill, but this much at all eyents, it is but fair to every one that I should state, and is, that immediately after I had assented to that act, I transmitted a certified copy of it to the Secretary of State, in accordance with the instructions by which I am bound on such occasions, that leaning myself to the opin ion—an opinion founded on the precedent afforded by the act of the Canadian Parliament-which empowers the Senate to examine witnesses on oath, that the act was ultra vires, I accompanied it by a full exposition of the arguments which could be urged in its support, but on the point being referred by the Secretary of State for the professional opinion of the law officers of the Crown, it was pronounced inconsistent with the Act of Confederation; and therefore the postponement of the en-

You then proceed to urge me, on grounds which are very fairly and forcibly stated, to decline the advice which has been unanimously tendered to me by my responsible ministers, to refuse to prorogue parliament; in other words, you require me to dismiss them from my counsel, for, gentlemen, you must be aware that this would be the necessary result of my assenting to your recommendation. You yourselves, gentlemen, do not form an actual majority of the House of Commons, and I have no means, 10.15 therefore, of ascertaining that the majority 11.40 of that body subscribes to the opinion you 11.12 have announced. Again, to what should 11.35 I have to appeal in justification of my conduct? Mission fields bear a similar relation to the Church as leaves to the tree. The one is dependent upon the other. The trunk sustains the leaves, the leaves the trunk: In like manner the church sustains the mission fields, the mission fields the church; the former by drawing out the sympathies and energies of the church, thereby making her healthy, vigorous, and strong; the latter by feeding and sustaining the infant mission fields until able to step out boldly themselves and take others by the hand Keeping this relation in view, which is too often lost sight of, let us give you a few ottings of our mission fields in Medonte and Tay, extending north to the Georgian Bay. This field extends over two townships and comprises four stations in all viz: Medonte, Russels, Waverly, and Victoria Harbor.
