EDITORIAL NOT S.

General Booth, of the Salvation Army, will visit Canada this fall, when he will conduct a Jubilee Salvation Campaign throughout the Dominion and United States.

The Toronto Telegram occasionally says a good thing, as, for instance, when it observes that Grits of the David Mills school might trade a little wisdom for some much needed common sense.

The plebiscite vote in Prince Edward Island—The returns show the following vote: Totals for the Province for prohibition 10,855, total against 3,331; total majority for prohibition 7,524.

Bill Nye is about to retire from the lecture platform, and go to his model farm in North Carolina. He calls it a model farm because it costs him three times as much to run it as he gets out of it.

One vote was cast for prohibition in St. Agatha, Waterloo county, and 93 against. A bet was made that there would not be a single vote for prohibition there, and one took the bet, to save his money voted the prohibition ticket.

In the House of Commons, on Friday, in reply to Chas. Fairbairn, M. P., Hon. Mr. Foster said that the Government had no official information as to the removal of the embargo against the importation of Canadian cattle into Great Britain.

That there is a strong feeling stirring in favor of a reduction of the present railway fares is proven by the forwarding of several bulky petitions to the Dominion House, praying for a first-class fare of two cents and a second-class fare of one cent and a quarter upon all railways.

Here are a couple of nuts for the blue-ribbon fraternity to crack:—"Notwithstanding alleged discontent in Manitoba and the North-West, hundreds think it a preferable habitation to Dakota and Minnesota, and the country is fast filling up."—"A special train of twenty-five cars brought settlers from Kansas City to Edmonton district, N. W. T., on March 28th."

Mr. Maclean, the conservative member for East York, has introduced what will prove no doubt a popular bill. It is one to prevent railway companies from charging more than two cents a mile for railway passenger tickets. Many of the American States have such a law, but in the United States the rates are already, as a rule lower than that, and the limit imposed has little effect.

Following in the footsteps of the temperance organ of Ontario, the people of Nova Scotia have become alive to the importance and great need of a prohibitory movement to stem the tide of intemperance which is sweeping over that Province. On Thursday, the 15th inst., a prohibitory plebiscite was taken at the same time the general elections for the Province were held, and the result is that the measure carried by a vote of nearly four to one. Thus are the people of the Dominion clamoring for a suppression of the liquor traffic, while the liquor-loving members of Parliament are evading the responsibility of legislating upon the matter.

EARLY REMINISCENCES.
The instrument, which was mentioned before, "The Hantboy," like all ancient musical instruments, has a tone low, low the pitch of modern instruments, and not being provided with a tuning slide, it is impossible to bring them into unison and it was with sorrow, we made known to our kind lady, the impossibility of reconciling these instruments. The lady then said that she felt sorry that things could not be made convenient not on her own account, but for the sake of her dear little son. Now, it is getting late, my dear son, and it is time we were making our way home, now, Johnnie, you take the instrument and the umbrella and we'll bid these gentlemen good-bye." They had now gone, but not very far before strained relations had sprung up between Johnnie and a little black dog. There were expressions of peace on the part of Johnnie for a little while, but the affair could not be assuaged, war then being declared, a vigorous onset was the order of the day, ending in various success. It was now that Johnnie changed his plan of action, and operating on the open flanks of the enemy with his Hantboy and being augmented with reinforcement in the shape of an umbrella, in the skillful hands of his kind mother, that was keeping up a heavy cannonading on the rear of the enemy, which in a very short time was vanquished, without the benefit of a conditional surrender. Now, little Johnnie and his kind mother were soon under way, and the picture became smaller in proportion as the distance increased, and at last, like a fantasy soon faded away.

On pension day, might be seen assembled, a very small portion of that vast array of brave veterans who had given a good account of themselves at Waterloo, Corunna, and Ciudad Rodrigo, and many other places, and there were not wanting two or three representatives of that brave little band, who by their hearty cheering, kept a superior force of their gallant enemy from approaching the double lines of Torres Vadrara before this stupendous work had reached its completion. One of these brave men visited our bedroom, his name was James Gorman, a Drum-Major in the army; he proved to be a great help to the band. He was the best drummer we had ever seen, and he was ready to oblige you. "By all means, go on," was the answer, and he thus began. "Not far south of Calcutta near the Delta of the Ganges, a small party consisting of three, the mother and her two loving children. They had left the cantonment late in the afternoon to take a botanical ramble in the direction of a small cooling stream whose banks were covered with fragrant flowers of every description of colour and shade, and the umbrageous trees so cool and refreshing are very plentiful on the banks of this little sacred stream at the foot of one of these trees the little party had taken up their position, and in a little while the children were lively in picking up the most gorgeous flowers they could get their hands on. On the other side of the stream as far as the eye could reach was nothing, but a sandy desert except here and there a patch of tawny colored shrubs, which seemed to be more luxuriant near the banks of the little stream. Now it happened that Capt. James Hallport came up to the little party and after paying respect due their dignity he politely withdrew. He had not been very far before he began to think that the little party were not in very safe quarters, because he had just heard the distant sound of the will peacock, a sure sign of an approaching enemy. The Captain had with him a gun of the most improved pattern, and in a very short time had it ready for the reception of an enemy. Now, that the old trundled yards down the stream, he had had fallen across the stream, which was a good substitute for a bridge, the bark was cut away from the under side of this with periodical bangs, and the bark of the upper side was quite loose, but yet it was resting on its parent stem; he now took the bridge and was soon on the other side of the stream. The Captain made his way up to the bank of the stream, and came in sight of the little party who had seen something that caused them no little surprise and the object of it, we are not very far from where the Captain was standing, and now he was in full view of a Bengal Tiger and now it was in the mind of the Captain to break all previous records of time, in the direction of the bridges. He got there out not a moment too soon. He had only got himself under the end of the bridge, and his gun in hand, when the tiger was on the bridge above his head, and refused to go on until the Captain fired a shot, but it did not take effect. The tiger now was making ready for battle, but the Captain, who suddenly seeing the tiger by the tail, and with the help of the bark gave by turning itself round, the monster was emptied into the stream; the Captain still kept a firm grip on the spinal pendance of his enemy, which, in a few minutes, croaked his last near the shore.

Scarcely two weeks ago, Richard Falls of Cavan, was laid to rest in a new cemetery burying ground, and it was only to day that the remains of his wife were laid beside him. She had been ailing for some time, but the death of her husband told heavily upon her, and on Monday at noon she breathed her last. Her sympathy is felt for the bereaved family in the hour of their sad affliction.
Kells, Fowler & Co. have purchased the vacant lot on King street, opposite Doak's hardware store, which was formerly owned by Messrs. Wm. Coombe and the late John Richards. The purchasers intend building a fine brick structure, which will take the place of the magnificent one destroyed by fire a few years since, but as Mrs. Richards did not care to build again, the lot has been idle ever since. There are times when partnership runs smooth but there are times when it does not.

IN MEMORIAM.
Lines Written on the Death of James Padgett, Who Deceased This Life on March 21st, 1894.
Oh, faded hopes and withered dreams,
How dreary life for future seems;
No hopes on earth for you now to show,
Since death has dealt its dreadful blow.
Three years of suffering and of pain,
Three years of worldly loss and gain;
The loss of life, gain to the soul,
His faith has triumphed over all.
He trusted Christ when days were drear,
Trusted in Him when skies were clear,
And now he reaps his bright reward,
A mansion with the blessed Lord.
Yet how sad to think of parting,
From the one we loved so well,
All around seems dark and dreary,
It's so lone no tongue can tell.
In thy earthly home was sunshine,
Lighted by thy presence there;
But to us it does seem lonely,
When we see thy vacant chair.
O, how patiently thou hast waited,
For thy spirit's upward flight;
Till he called thee with the angels,
And to dwell with him in light.
A wife now is left to mourn,
Altogether from his children torn;
God's holy will—it must be done,
Although it fills our home with gloom.
Though we wish that we could see thee now,
And speak to thee as of yore;
Yet back to thee in this world of pain,
We could wish thee never more.
But now our hopes with him are fled,
We shall his face no more behold,
Until we walk those streets of gold.

Don't Try to Cheat a Lawyer.
A young lawyer, just starting in his profession, hung out his sign in a Connecticut town where there was only one other lawyer, an aged judge.
A certain fellow, thinking to get legal advice for nothing, called upon the young man, told him he was very glad he had come into the town, as the old judge was getting superannuated, and then contrived in a sort of neighborly talk to get some legal questions answered. Then thanking the young man, he put on his hat and was about to leave, when the young man asked him if he should charge the advice, for which the fee was five dollars. The old fellow went into a violent passion, and swore he never would pay. The young lawyer told him he would sue him if he didn't.
So the old fellow went down to see the judge, found him hoeing in his garden, and said:
"That young scamp that's just come into town, I dropped in to make a neighborly call on him, and he charges me five dollars for legal advice."
"Served you right," said the judge; "you had no business to have gone to him."
"But have I got to pay it, judge?"
"Of course you have."
"Well, then," said the man, I suppose I must pay it."
"Hold on!" said the judge; "aren't you going to pay me?"
"Pay you? What for?"
"For legal advice."
"What do you charge?"
"Ten dollars."
The result was that the old fellow had to pay five dollars to the young lawyer and ten dollars to the old one.
