It is with a feeling of uneasiness that British naval experts compare the shooting of which he complains with the recent performance of the Formidable, one of our finest and most modern battleships in the Mediterranean, says the London Express.

According to information received in private letters, this ship recently fired 27 rounds with her 12-inch guns at a target measuring 600 square feet. The distance was 1500 yards, a range so short that no battleship could safely engage at it on account of the torpedoes that might be aimed at her by the enemy. She only hit the target once.
