It is wonderful how much the general public know about running a newspaper. McLean, of the Presbyterian Church Mount Pleasant, as elders and officers of the Omemee charge, together with the officials and elders of the Omemee Church, held a meeting on Tuesday last to consult with the Rev. A. McWiliams, the moderator of the Peterborough Presbytery, in having the Rev. W. Mc-Kay remain with them during the summer months. The Moderator seeing how unanimous the meeting was, in having Mr. McKay remain with them, gave the officers some encouragement, and said he would bring it up before the Presbytery, and would use his influence in having him remain with them.

The Canadian Presbyterian throws ing a few days in that city, will leave the following timely hint to clergymen and church workers generally: "The press being friendly as a whole, and having immense power and unrivalled facilities for reaching the people, might not the church make more use of it than is now made. Is there any reason why a minister should not give the local press an occasional extract from his sermons and thus reach a much larger congregation than the one he preached to from the pulpit. Is there any reason why a minister should uot send the abhor puffing, and above everything at 7 p. m. else clerical puffing, but an occasional striking paragraph from a sermon or a newsy item is not puffing. There is a proper as well as an improper use of the press. One of the worst varieties of improper use is badgering the local editor to insert dead-head church notices. Never do that."

A FUGITIVE FROM JUSTICE.

An Omemee Episode-William Redmond, who Was Committed by Magistrate Cornwall, gives Constable Mitchell the Elip and Makes Good his Escape.

The village of Omemee had quite a sensation for the past week that will afford gossip for the natives for some time and will not be soon forgotten by those directly interested in the affair. It appears that Mrs. John Henderson, who lives three miles north of the village, lost $150 on the evening of the 31st of last March, between her home and Parsons' store, she having discovered her loss while shopping in the latter place. The money consisted of two fifties and five ten dollar bills. There were parties in the store when she lost the money, among whom was William Redmond There was a reward offered to the finder but apparently not sufficient to induce the holder to claim the amount. If there was any suspicion against any party the losers were biding their time for some developments. It appears that Redmond went up to Lindsay last Wednesday, returned that evening, drunk, and was more flush than his financial condition would warrant. He continued on the spree Thursday and Friday and during this time the detective found that he had changed two fifty dollar bills. On Saturday morning Mr. Henderson, son of Mrs. Henderson, swore out a warrant for his arrest, charging him with having found the lost money. Constable Mitchell executed the warrant, and placed Redmond in the lock-up about ten a.m., he still being quite drunk. After the priswas on missions and was very instructive oner had slept off his debauch and realized where he was, it was no time until he was seen on his way up to the office of Reeve Cornwall, to find out what he had done. The officer put him in again, but on Sunday, Redmond made his escape and kept secreted until Monday morning, when he went up to the magistrate and gave himself up agreeing to report at the hearing at ten o'clock that

The court room was crowded, the hearing of the two charges, viz., taking the money and breaking out of the lock-up, asting from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. The prosecution was looked after by W. A. Stratton and the prisoner was ably defended by Mr. Dennistoun, legal gentlemen hailing from Peterboro'.

The evidence against the prisoner in both cases warranted Magistrate Cornwall in committing him to jail at Lindsay. Officer T. A. Mitchell put the handcuffs on the prisoner and started with him for the lock-up. Redmond went peaceable enough until he got near the cooler, when he made a plunge for free-dom and being fleet of foot distanced all pursuers. The prisoner was chased to the river and finding that he was in close quarters plunged into the water, and it being dark had no trouble in evading the pursuing officers. All efforts on last Tuesday failed to find him and is still at large. The parties in the suit are all old residents, and while Mrs. Henderson has the sympathy of her neighbors for her loss, the prisoner's aged mother and young wife are objects of sincere sympathy in the late unfortunate occurrence. The prisoner, who is a fine mechanic, is wild during his periodical sprees, but is popular as was evidenced in the fact that not a citizen left even a straw in the way of escape from the officers .- Watchman.
