QUEER OLD SAN JUAN.

The Fine Specimen of a Walled Town

That the United States Will Have. San Juan is a perfect specimen of a walled town, with portcullis, moat, gates and battlements, Built over 250 years ago, it is still in good condition and repair. The walls are picturesque, and represent a stupendous work and cost in themselves. Inside the walls, seven at right angles. The houses are closely and compactly built of brick, outside and painted in a variety of colors. The upper floors are occupied by the more respectable people, while the poorer classes, who crowd one upon another in the most appalling man-"What you?" said the Hungarian, ner. 1450 B.C., or upwards of 33 centuries ago. Pharaoh was building a new Temple of Thebes. The masons received very little cash, but a quantity of provisions which the contractor thought sufficient was handed to them on the first of each month. Sufficient or not, they mostly ate it before the time had elapsed. On one occasion many of them had nothing left quite. early in the month, so they marched to the contractor's house, before which they squatted and refused to budge until justice was done. The contractor persuaded them to lay their distress before Pharaoh, who was about to visit the works, and he gave them a handsome supply of corn, and so all went on well for that month. But the same state of things recurred by the middle of the next, and for some days the men struck work.
