Two Joneses lived next door to each other, and, having to call or one of them, Brown, of course, went to the wrong house. A crabbed servant answered the bell, and, on she replied snappishly, as if she had been bothered with many such inquiries, No, it ain't! and slammed the door in his face.

Brown walked on a few yards or so, when a bright thought struck him. He returned at once and rang the same bell again. Again the

A PARISH OF TEN.

The parish of Upper Eldon, in Hants, England, is probably unique among the parishes of the United Kingdom. It is situated about five miles from Romsey, and boasts a population of ten. The village church stands in the centre of the farmyard of one of the two houses in the parish, and the farm and is also the village metery. The building dates from the eleventh century, and contains a reading-desk, communion table and rails, and five pews, but does not boast a pulpit. The living is of the annual value of £45, but there is not at present an incumbent. Occasionally a ciergyman will visit the district or pass through on a walking tour. The bell will then be rung and the parishioners will attend an impromptu
