The newspaper brings together the wide awake buyer and the wide awake merchant. To be successful, advertising must be looked after just as systematically as any other branch of business.

An advertisement doesn't need an introduction. It should go straight to the point without any equivocation.

Let your rivals pay their own advertising bills. Don't use your signs to advertise them by mentioning them. It is of advantage to an advertiser to have some one specialty with which his name can always be connected in the public mind.
