The War Summary.

Monday, July 4, 1898. Cover's fleet has been destroyed. The particulars are not to hand but it is stated that Admiral Sampson forced the harbor and presumably after some fighting the Spanish ships were blown up by their own crews. One Spanish ship got out to sea and was chased by American ships, with every likelihood of being captured. A mass of details of the fighting at Santiago has come to hand. The Americans appear to have fought splendidly, but were opposed with equal bravery by the Spaniards. The Americans appear to have lost about a thousand in killed and wounded, and the Spaniards, fighting behind entrenchments suffered as severely. General Shafter was first reported as intending to withdraw and await reinforcements before attempting to carry the city, but later despatches indicate, probably as a consequence of the destruction of the Spanish fleet, that the Americans may celebrate the fourth of July in Santiago.
