Sermon Preached in Christ Church, Omemee, by the Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, M. A., on Dominion Day.

I Thess., IV: 11. "Study to be quiet, and to do your own business, and to work with your hands"

It is no uncommon thing to hear busy people declare that they have no time to attend to religion amidst their toil. Possibly a more convenient season may come, and in the later days of life, when d bridge work inserted. they are able to retire from active duty, they hope to bestow their dearly-earned leisure on the affairs of the soul. But such a plea reveals a complete ignorance of the very nature of religion, and especially of the peculiar characteristics which distinguish the christian religion. Too busy with life to attend to the claims of religion! That is like the famous complaint of one who could not see the forest for the trees. Yet All the latest and improved branches the trees are the forest. So then this alty are the material of religion.
