PRINCE GEORGE'S SON.

The infant prince who has just been throne has of course all the ancestry of his illustrious father, and is on his nother's side, through the Duke of Teck, sprung from the reigning house of Wurtemberg and from the early kings of Prussia. Though not descended from the older branch of Stuart, he is a distant cousin of the Princess of Bavaria, who is now the head of that line, and he is also distantly related to the Czar of Russia, He inherits no title, Her Majesty having some years ago decreed that the style of royal highness should belong only to her own children and children of her sons. No English sovereign before Queen Victoria ever lived to see a great-grand-child. Indeed, none between Edward III. and George I. even saw a grand-child, with the exception of James II.. who survived the infants of his daughter Aune. Concerning the new prince the Leeds 'Mercury' also notes that he is at the same time third cousin to his father and second cousin. to his mother. The Duke of Kent and the Duke of Cambridge, sons f George III., were brothers. Their respective children, Queen Victoria and the Duch ess of Teck, are first cousins. In turn the Prince of Wales and the Duchess of York are second cousing, so that the Duke of York and the new prince are as has been stated, third cousins to each other. On the other hand, the Duchess of York is second consin, once removed, to the Duke of York, and therefore second cousin, twice removed to his son,

DIES AND STRIKES.

the new-born prince.-St. James's Ga-

Mr. Debs has come, like other labor leaders before him, to the conclusion that strikes are bound to fail because the organized elements of society are against them. He asserts that General Miles did not go to Chicago to restore order but to put down the strike. We can easily suppose that the soldier did not perceive much distinction between the strike and its inseparable results. When we want to drive a pestilence out of a country we seek for the cause of the malady and assail that, and possibly the General thought that as a matter of tactics if he stopped the strike he would be taking the straightest way to remove the crimes which were its necessary results. It is to be remembered, however, ever of attacking the strike except by preventing crime and unlawful conduct. If the strike could have existed without unlawful results General Miles, whatever his notions with regard to it, would ness necessarily stopped the strike Mr. the organized forces of society are against strikes. A relationship between the elements which glorify lawlessness and those which glorify Mr. Debs is suggested by the fact that it was the same town of Brazil, in Indiana, which turned out with its sheriff to give a banquet to two man-slaying prisoners on their way to the state prison, which turned out a week or two later to hear an enthusiastic address from Mr. Debs. Mr. Debs does well to commend his followers to turn to the ballot box. It would have saved many lives and mnny million dollars if he had done so sooner. If the majority think with him they can make think the majority in any country will ever give to any Debs or any irrespontraffic of the country whenever they shall regard the workmen in any shop as having a grievance. They will at

to death on Friday last, has persisted in his refusal to make an appeal to the frequently choose what he considered a Court of Cassation, and his execution will take place ten days hence.

The suggestion that Canada should purchase General Wolfes' sword is one that most Canadians will say amen to. It was in Canada that Wolfe won his greatest fame and met his death. His sword, figuratively speaking, of course, settled the political fate of and may be said to have made Canada. It is the relic of a brave soldier, honored by all Jewelry & Watches in Canala, and would be rightly placed where Canadians could point to it as a memento of their past

The Vigilant won the special race which took place between her and the Britannia over the Queen's course in the Solent off Cowes in the Isle of Wight on Saturday last. Her victory seems to have been a well-earned one. She took the lead from the beginning and maintained it throughout.

The Bank of England, the greatest monetary institution in the world, attained its bi-centinary on Friday last. The founder of the Bank of England was one William Paterson, a Scotch merchant, who hit upon this expedient to enable William III to raise supplies for the war against France. The scheme at first met with great opposition.

There will be no more election protests. The time limit for all constituencies not already protested, expired Wednesday. Twenty-nine protests have been entered in all, 15 against Liberals, 3 against Patrons, and 11 against Conservatives. Messrs. Laidlaw, Kappele & Bicknell entered ail the protests on behalf of the Conservative party. The protest in West Lambton has been abandoned.

The Decroit Journal recalls attention to the picture of thousands starving through lack of employment in the large cities of America, while outside farmers are clamoring in vain for laborers to till the fields. Even this year it says "farm labor was so scarce that in some parts of the country farmers' were unable to cultivate and harvest their crops. In Pennsylvania, where miners and mill hands were idle, colored men had to be brought from the South to till the fields-

Wheat is now at the lowest price it has ever been, and the prospects for a rise in the future are not encouraging. Van Horne's two dollar wheat is all s myth. The new crop promises to be beyond expectation. An official report to the American Government tells of a largely-increased wheat acreage in Argentine, which seems to be the coming bete-noir of the American Agriculturist. There will be good crops in Great Britain and in Europe this year, and consequently American wheat is not likely to find a better market during the coming season than it has for a year past. The New York Herald says the farmers of West and Northwest will be at their wits' end to know how to make both ends meet next year.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To Editors Mirror :-

[CONTINUED FROM LAST WEEK] Mr. Petch now comes to Peterboro'; he had two purposes for doing so, one was to see his friend, Mr. Raymond, the other to give a le ture in the interest of the sons of temperance. As we gave some little account of Mr. Raymond's nature and character in our last week's letter it might be just as well to say something in respect to Mr. Petch in this. Mr. Petch in his early school days took great delight in little theatrical performances, which were very much in practice in the schools of the United States at that time, and in order to prepare himself proficiently for the stage he had to study nature in a lits various forms. and he well knew that nature had given to every emotion of the mind its own proper outward expression.

triend, Mr. Raymond, at a time when Mr. Raymond was expecting a party for a picture, which he had promised. They now appeared (on the virtue of may not prove fatal. their promise) for the picture they were so anxious to : ee. The party were three in number, father, mother, and their dear little daughter. The mother was a that the General had no means what- sparkling, blooming dame, who would he very h art of a Grecian concrete inflame, her eyes bright, teeth white and her hair of deep yellow, in fact she was nature in all the relations of womanhood. Very close to the mother's side was her affect onate daughter who seemed some months too young to be have had to let it alone. He used his engaged-in the correspondence of matforces to prevent people from breaking rimony, her golden ringlets that carthe law, and if the stoppage of lawless- essed her lovely cheek, in such a mode the maid began to speak. "Ma, shall I ask Mr. Raymond about our picture.' Deb's conclusion is clearly proved that It is better to give the gentleman a little time, my dear daughter, patience is a great virtue, and it is not the characteristic mark of high birth, to be too much in haste, and I am certain the picture will be ready in due time. The lather came out to this country when very young, his parents in the old country being in good circumstances, were able to send out a little money now and then to help him along, he had located himself first in the City of Montreal, and remained there till he was about thirt -five years of age.
